PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

This book, begun many years ago, has been of gradual growth. It was the writer's first intention to prepare only a genealogical record of his father's immediate family; afterwards he undertook to enlarge its scope so as to include the descendants of his grandfather; and then again at his father's request he began to trace backward the line of ancestry as far as possible, in order to connect the European with the American family.

In 1877 we visited Ireland, Scotland, England, Holland, etc., and while there obtained what information we could relative to the work, and began arranging the materials.

The preparation of this book has been a work of great difficulty, which those only can appreciate who have themselves attempted to perform a similar task. Our early American ancestors, while engaged in subduing the forests and undergoing the hardships and dangers of frontier life, paid little attention to the recording of their family history; at least, but little has been preserved to posterity, or is now accessible. A great difficulty has also arisen in collecting information from the very many distant and scattered families in all parts of the land, by means of correspondence. While hundreds of letters of inquiry have been sent out, many remained unanswered; a large number of those received were very meager; and some of them almost illegible.

In the search for information concerning our own branch of the family, we came into possession of much of the genealogy of other branches, which we thought ought to be preserved, and this has led still further to the enlargement of the work.

For the seeming partiality in the treating of some families and persons much more fully than others of equal, or more worthy of like attention we offer this apology: Our own personal knowledge, or the information furnished by others, has enabled us to enlarge in some cases, and the lack of these has compelled us to be too brief in others. An earnest effort has been made to secure accuracy and to render the work as complete as possible; but owing to the deficiency of historical data, the desired ideal completeness was not attainable by such time and attention as we could give.

This book is duly copyrighted according to law, in order to preserve the rights of the author and keep the work from spoliation; but permission is freely given to make extracts therefrom and publish sketches of particular families or individuals, provided due credit is properly given to this work.

When a name is first recorded it is written in full, if the full name is known to the writer, and whenever a contracted form afterwards appears it indicates the name by which the individual is known among his most intimate friends. Thus Robert Wilson Steen when written R. Wilson Steen indicates that he was familiarly called Wilson Steen; and John Work Steen, afterwards written John W. Steen, intimates that among his friends he was called John Steen.

This book is not intended for general circulation, but only for those of our own name and relationship. These will find in it a genealogical record of the past, and one that can at any time be easily extended so as to include future generations. It is hoped this record will prove both interesting and profitable to the families and individuals chiefly concerned; for none of us should willingly remain ignorant of our forefathers and kindred, whose lives and character affect us more than those of any other people.

The writer wishes to express his gratitude to all who have rendered him assistance to any degree, by furnishing desired information. But thanks are especially due to the late Rev. George Steen, of Limavady, Ireland; Mrs. Annie C. Steen, of Belfast, Ireland; Mrs. Sarah Steen Irwin, of Toronto, Canada; Mr. Nathaniel Steen, of Streetsboro, Ontario; the late Carroll J. Steen, Esq., of Cato, Miss.; Mr. James P. Gossett of Williams-ton, S. C.; the Rev. John F. Steen, of New York, N. Y.; Mr. James Steen Martin, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Miss Anna C. Steen, of

New Castle, Pa.; Mrs. Eliza Steen Beveridge, of Buck Run, O.; Mr. Benjamin W. Steen, of Glen Dale, Ind.; Miss Anna J. Steen, of Martinstown, Mo., and others.

In our extensive correspondence we received very many requests for personal photographs, which we were unable to supply; and in order to gratify this expressed wish we have taken the liberty to insert among the illustrations in the book portraits of our own family.

It has been truly said that no one can climb very high on any genealogical tree without finding some dead branches, yet the writer feels a just pride in the good and honorable character of the family as a whole — a fact which should stimulate us and our posterity to act worthy of such parentage and relationship.

The book is now sent forth with the prayer that those who read these pages may belong to the Family of God, and have their names and record in the "LAMB'S BOOK OF LIFE."

PREFACE TO THE REVISED EDITION

Soon after the publication of "The Steen Family in Europe and America," in 1900, the writer received notices of several errors concerning dates and facts, and numerous questions in regard to various branches of the family, which led to further investigation. In the course of several years a considerable amount of new and important information was obtained. It was the writer's intention to publish a small supplement to the work in pamphlet form, containing notes, corrections and additions, which any one who desired could obtain. But on account of the discovery of important historic matter concerning some branches of the family, many friends began to suggest and urge a revised edition of the book. Consequently in 1911 a Circular Letter was sent out to all the persons of the various branches of the family whose names and postoffice addresses could be ascertained, with the request to forward to the writer full information concerning themselves and families. To this circular many replies were received giving much additional information; but as some did not reply, their record will stand as in the old edition. The work of republication has been hindered for more than three years by the pressure of pastoral duties, and since then by long and severe illness. The work, however, is now at length completed under great difficulties, after a period of forty years' labor, and is sent forth in the hope that it will be received in a spirit of broad charity. Many hundreds of letters have been written, thousands of miles traveled and considerable expens incurred in the prosecution of the work. It contains the names of nearly four thousand persons, and besides the genealogical record, will give numerous historical and biographical sketches. There are enrolled over two thousand persons bearing the name of STEEN, and eighteen hundred Steen descendants having other names, the whole record, as much as possible, being brought down to the present time. The Steen family relationship is now very widely scattered throughout England, Ireland, Scotland, Holland, Norway, Sweden, India, Australia, Canada, and nearly all the States and Territories in the American Union. They possess a history worthy of preservation, and no one of us should willingly remain ignorant of our forefathers and kindred whose lives and character affect us more than those of any other people.

The writer wishes to express his gratitude to all who have to any extent aided him in his work, but he is especially indebted to the late James Steen, Esq., of Eatontown, N. J.; Miss Jean Burns Martin, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Dr. Thomas E. Steen, of Martha, Tenn.; Mrs. Nellie Steen Kidder, of Springfield, O.; Mrs. Zoe M. Steen Moore, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Mr. Thomas H. Gossett, of New York City, N. Y., and others. The order and arrangement of the books, chapters and sections of the work have been changed, and the index simplified, so as to make easy reference to the subject-matter.

The name Steen seems to be of Scandinavian origin, but the vast majority of those whose names and record are found in this volume are Scotch-Irish. These people are not a mixture of the Scotch and Irish races, as many suppose, but a people of pure Scotch blood who were born or lived in Ireland. In truth, there is not a drop of Irish blood in the real Scotch-Irishman. This fact may be illustrated by an incident that occurred in Glasgow, Scotland, at the Council of Reformed Churches throughout the World holding the Presbyterian System in 1896. The late Rev. Dr. John Hall, then pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, was spoken of as an Irishman by one of the delegates. He replied: "I am not an Irishman, sir!" He was then asked if he were not born in Ireland. "Did you not live and labor in Ireland for many years?" He replied in the affirmative. "Well, then," said the speaker, "if you were born in Ireland, and lived and labored in Ireland, how is it that you are not an Irishman?" Dr. Hall replied: "If kittens were born in an oven, would that make them loaves of bread?" This shows us what the real Scotch-Irishman himself thinks about it. If many of us are of Scotch-Irish descent we have no reason to be ashamed, but should strive to live worthy of such ancestry, and, like many of them, be true and faithful "followers of God as dear children."

Moses D. A. Steen,

GLEN HAZEL, WORTHINGTON, O., November 15, 1916.

INTRODUCTION

The name STEEN seems to be of Scandinavian origin, and indicative of strength or force of character. It is closely allied to such names as Steyn in the Dutch, Stein in the German, and Stone in the English, all of which signify the same thing, a rock or stone, which implies firmness.

The early possessors of the name seem also to have maintained something of the character indicated thereby. Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, who came to the throne in 1611, as a Christian hero and patriot fought for liberty of conscience, and led an army of sixty thousand men into Germany for the noble purpose of rescuing Protestants from the tyranny of the house of Austria, had an officer under his command whose name was STEEN.

In Norway and Denmark the name is still not uncommon; and near the close of the nineteenth century a number of families from these countries have emigrated to America and settled in the Northwestern and Pacific Coast States, with some of whom the writer has had correspondence or personal intercourse.

In 1891 Oscar II, King of Norway and Sweden, appointed a Mr. Steen to the position of Premier. The following is copied from a New York daily paper of May 25, 1891:

"The Conservative ministry has been overthrown because the Berner resolution was passed against its wishes by a vote of 59 to 55; and when the King requested the Radical Berner to form a new Cabinet he declined, and referred the King to his bitterest enemy, Mr. Steen, who is undoubtedly, after Sverdrap, the most eminent man in the party. King Oscar has, in acting on this advice, given a guarantee that he is a Constitutional King, who has accepted parliamentarism in good faith. Mr. Steen, who is the head master or principal of the public gymnasium in Stravenger, and has for many years been a leader of the more radical wing of the Liberal party in the Storting, is personally obnoxious to the King; and the general impression in Norway has been that Oscar II would under no circumstances consent to any public recognition of him. Mr. Steen, as will be remembered, played a conspicuous part in the impeachment of the conservative ministry Selmer, and the contention of the Right has been that he prevaricated, and in other respects was unscrupulous in the selection of his means for ousting his enemies. He has, however, among the public at large the reputation of being an able and upright man, fearless and determined, and of great executive force. His radicalism is not at all alarming, referring chiefly to the extension of the suffrage, which ought long ago to have been granted; and the absolute equality of the two kingdoms. The only possible danger which the country may incur from his leadership is the further straining of the relations with Sweden; for the new Premier is not of a conciliatory temperament, and is imbued with a sense of 'Norse-Norse' independence to the very finger tips. It would be a great misfortune if the question of diplomatic representation were to be pressed to the point of arousing further hostility in Sweden, and thereby weakening the union."

IN HOLLAND or THE NETHERLANDS the name has attracted greater attention from the fact that one of the most celebrated Dutch painters bore the name of Steen—the renowned Jan Steen—whose history is well known. The following item is copied from the "Library of Universal Knowledge":

"STEEN, JAN.—A celebrated Dutch painter, born in 1626, or, according to others, in 1636, at Leyden, where his father was a brewer. He showed a predilection for art, which led to his being apprenticed to a German painter, Nicholas Knuepfer, of Utrecht. Subsequently he became a pupil of Van Goyen, whose daughter Margaret he married. Very soon his repute became established. As he worked in a slow and elaborate manner, his gains were insufficient, and he started a brewery at Delft. Steen died in 1679 or 1689, leaving his family in very destitute case.

"As an artist of the Dutch school he ranks high, and his works are now much valued. In humor and spirit they are scarcely surpassed, and their coloring is clear, fresh and delicate. At times he attempted historical subjects, but his success in these was not great. It was in the homely and domestic scenes that his genius exhibited itself, and in this field he has scarcely since been equaled."

He was a relative of Rembrandt, and painted in all about three hundred pictures, among which is a fine portrait of himself in the Ryks Museum at Amsterdam. "The Feast of St. Nicholas" is one of his best and happiest productions, and represents his own family. His father and mother are in the background; his wife, in the foreground, extends her arms to a happy little girl, while six other children are included in the group. At the Louvre in Paris is one of his latest works, dated 1674—"A Feast at an Inn"—painted after he had opened his tavern, and representing the actual interior of the place, and valued at thirty thousand francs. See Century Magazine, December, 1893, pp. 175-8. See also J. Steen, Etude sur L'art en Hollande, by Van Westrheenen (The Hague, 1856).

JAN STEEN AND HIS FAMILY, PAINTED BY HIMSELF.

In visiting The Netherlands many years ago the writer found in The Hague fifteen families who bore the name of Steen, and in Amsterdam, Rotterdam and other cities a lesser number. In entering the Royal Museum and Picture Gallery at The Hague we presented a card to the conductor, who glanced at it a moment, then clasped our hand in both of his, exclaiming with animated countenance, "Steen! STEEN!" and then hurriedly led us to several famous pictures, and pointing to them with enthusiasm and apparent joy, cried out, "Jan Steen! JAN STEEN!"

JAN STEEN!" Thus, although we were far away from home, a stranger in a foreign land, the interest and pleasure of our sojourn there was greatly increased by the simple fact that we belong to The Steen Family.

In the sixteenth century the Roman Catholic persecution of Protestants was most appalling. The Duke of Alva, it is said, even surpassed the persecuting heathen emperors of Rome in his extreme cruelty while attempting to crush out the rising spirit of religious and political liberty; and according to Grotius destroyed the lives of one hundred thousand Protestants during the six years of his regency (1567-1573). And in consequence of these troubles many of the most upright citizens fled into other countries for safety; among them a family of the name of Steen crossed over the sea and located in Ayrshire, Scotland, where the descendants remained for many generations. They were a noble stock of Protestant Christians of an unyielding type, who had determined to maintain liberty of conscience and freedom in the worship of God at every hazard. The spirit of persecution which had prevailed so extensively in The Netherlands afterwards again arose in Scotland, and they were called to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ" and suffer imprisonment for loyalty to God and the Gospel as they understood it. Our Scottish ancestral head, a devout and earnest Christian, was caused to languish for a considerable time at the "Bass Rock," of historical fame as the prison house of the Covenanters, and was married to an estimable Christian woman on the very day of his release, probably at declaration of indulgence in 1672. This island rock is situated near the mouth of the Frith of Forth, three miles northeast of North Berwick, in the North Sea. It is nearly round, about one mile in circumference, four hundred feet high, traversed by a vast cavern, and inaccessible on all sides except at the southwest, where it is impossible to land in stormy weather. After the Restoration, King Charles II purchased this island rock and fortress for £4,000, or about $20,000, as a prison for Covenanters. It was a stronghold very difficult to capture, so much so that a mere handful of the partisans of James II held the place from June, 1691, to April, 1694, against all the forces sent against it by King William III, who afterwards had the fortifications demolished in 1701. It is now a private possession, let out to a keeper, who receives fees from visitors.

As early as the reign of James I a family by the name of Steen crossed the Channel from Scotland into the North of Ireland, and located upon the banks of the Foyle, in the Province of Ulster, and County of Londonderry. This was probably about 1620, or perhaps a few years later. Here they continued to reside, notwithstanding the troublous times, and some at least escaped the terrible massacre of Protestants in Ireland in 1641, during the reign of Charles I. Other families remained in Scotland until a much later period. One family came over into Ireland during the protectorate of Oliver Cromwell, and settled first at Killinsky, in County Down, and afterwards located in Antrim, probably about 1653 or 1655. Still another family — a Rev. Mr. Steen, a Scotch Covenanter minister — came over into Ireland near the close of the reign of Charles II, under whom they had endured many privations, as well as imprisonment for conscience' sake. These came into Ireland about 1684 or 1685, and located in County Antrim, at a place called "The Vow," on the banks of the River Bann, not many miles from Coleraine. In the course of time there were families by the name of Steen living at Culmore, overlooking Loch Foyle, in the vicinity of Londonderry, Antrim, Coleraine, Balleney, Ballyghan, The Vow, etc. These no doubt were all from the same original stock, and possessed the characteristics of their forefathers — firmness in Christian faith, and fidelity to their principles in the midst of persecution and severe trials. Some of these kindred according to the flesh suffered in the terrible "siege of Derry," in 1688, when King James II endeavored to destroy by starvation this stronghold of Protestantism. The siege had been kept up for one hundred and five days, when, under the command of William, the Prince of Orange, a man-of-war and two ships loaded with provisions arrived. It was with great difficulty that they could gain even an approach to the city, for the army of King James determined to prevent it if possible. A great chain had been stretched across the river to hinder the passage of any vessel, but the warship of the Prince of Orange came against it with such force as to break the chain, yet the rebound was so great as to throw the vessel near the shore, where it stuck in the mud. The enemy raised a shout of triumph and rushed forward to board the ship and capture all the soldiers, crew, vessels and provisions; but a broadside, simultaneously shot from all the cannons on board, not only arrested the attack, but the concussion also drove the vessel from the mud bank and caused it to float out into deep water, to the great joy and relief of those on board the ship. They succeeded in running past all the batteries and obstructions in the river, and in relieving the starving inhabitants of the city of Londonderry. The greatest cruelty had been practiced by the besiegers, and the utmost suffering endured by the besieged, who had eaten all their horses and dogs, and were said to be on their last ration of tallow and salted hide when the relief came. The garrison of SEVEN THOUSAND MEN had dwindled down to THREE THOUSAND, many of them having died of starvation while resenting the offer of a bribe of £2,000, or about $10,000, to any one who would open the gates to the enemy. They sent back their answer in the heroic message, "NO SURRENDER," and remained steadfast to the last.

In 1877, again in 1896, and again in 1902, the writer visited a number of families by the name of Steen living in the northern counties of Ireland, and in every instance found them to be earnest, orthodox Presbyterian Christian people, several of whom were Presbyterian clergymen in charge of congregations, while others were ruling elders in the church. During the second visit he was driven to the delightful home of John Steen, J. P., near Castlerock, in County Londonderry. It was a fine old Episcopal residence, which he had purchased at the time of the disestablishment. A flag was floating gracefully over it, which he supposed was some British or Irish ensign; but it proved to be the Scotch-Irish Steen family Crest, or ancient coat-of-arms, which had been in use for more than two hundred and fifty years. On a scroll beneath the figure was the motto, "Ad Diem Tendo," literally translated, "To-day I arise." Its rightful color is Presbyterian true blue, which symbolizes fidelity. The following is a small cut of the same, which he found in use among other Steen families, as in Belfast, as their coat-of-arms, used on writing paper and visiting cards.

We were told it represents the fabled Phoenix bird rising from its own ashes, with extended wings, ready to fly away — an emblem of faith in God and hope of immortality, which even the dark days of fiery persecution could not destroy. This steadfast faith and heroic endurance was characteristic of the Steen family in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The writer has also found Steen families in Scotland, England, Canada and the United States possessing in general the same characteristics. There were several other styles of the Steen family crest, or coat-of-arms, in use in other countries, and by different branches of the family, but this one, taken from a Book of Ancient Heraldry, was the one we found in use among the Scotch-Irish families.

Mr. Thomas H. Gossett, of New York City, in sending us a photographic copy of the Steen family crest of Scotland as shown in Fairbairn's "Book of Family Crests of Great Britain and Ireland," edition of 1905, page 525, describes it as follows: "Steen — Scotland, eagle head between two wings." Motto, "Ad Diem Tendo."

The late James Steen, Esq., of Eatontown, N. J., in contrasting the Scotch with the Dutch coat-of-arms wrote as follows:

EATONTOWN, N. J., May 29, 1906.

Rev. Moses D. A. Steen, Menlo Park, Cal.

MY DEAR PARSON: I congratulate you on coming through the earthquake all right. I see you had vitality enough left to let your friends know, through The Presbyterian, that you were still alive and, as the boys say, "on deck." I have been lately amusing myself, when in the city (New York), in examining the Dutch origin of the "Steen family." And it now seems to me there is as much variation in the spelling of the name as in that of any other family with which I have been conversant. I have looked up the "Steen Genealogy" in Holland, as published in The Algemeen Nederlandsch Famileblad, commencing with Jan Steen, who married Annetje Ouders November 24, 1647, and Jacob Steen, son of Ariens, who was a creditor of an estate in 1593. They do not seem, however, to go back far enough to get our Scotch ancestry, and they also seem to trace directly into the "Steyn" family. This family's genealogy, in part, was published in 1879 in Rotterdam by Van Hangel & Eeltjes. That commences with the Jan Steyn, who was born at Zwolle and married Gertrude, daughter of John; both he and his wife died in 1529. One of his descendants, a Matthew Steyn, seems to have disappeared from Holland about 1575 to 1580. And the "Matthew Steyns" or Steens of Scotland and Ireland seem to be very numerous. Some of this family changed their name to "Steen" as early as 1620. Members of the family occupied prominent positions in Church and in State in Holland. Numbers of them were burgomasters, sheriffs and secretaries of state in Harlem, judges of the court for the trial of small causes, and one seems to have been councilor to the King of Spain, while a number are put down a school-"meisters," and captains without number, meaning sea captains. In this connection it is of interest to note that the first Steens in Scotland seem to have spelled their name "Stein," and so the coat-of-arms of the Steen family in "Burke's Extinct Peerage of Scotland" accepts the name "Stein." I would not for the world hurt the feelings of John Steen's family of Castle Rock, for I am satisfied that his use of the crest of the Steen family, which his widow says was hereditary, was simply assumed, for he never used the rest of the coat-of-arms, was not the oldest son, and his brother, to whom it would naturally descend if it was hereditary, there being no descendant of the name, knows nothing concerning its origin, nor does he seem to use it. It does not appear in any of the "live" books on heraldry, but does appear as "extinct" in "Burke's Extinct and Dormant Peerage of Great Britain."

In passing, you as well as myself have as much right to the crest as did he. But the crest which he used is that given by Burke to the extinct family of Scotland, meaning thereby, "extinct" as to the coat-of-arms, bearing "Armi gerent." This leads us to the comparison between the coat-of-arms of the Stein (Steen) family of Scotland as given by Burke with the Dutch family of "Steyn." And there is a marked similarity; in the first place, the shield bears a chevron, in both cases; the Dutch family, ultra Protestants, bears upon its chevron no crosses, as does the Scotch family. In place of three demi-lions rampant on the shield, the Dutch family has three ducks, webbed feet and all. They are what is called in heraldry "passant"—that is, apparently walking, with their wings at rest. In place of the eagle's head between two outstretched wings, which obtains in the Scotch arms, the Dutch crest has a "duck" with outstretched wings. My investigation is by no means concluded, but it seems to me a very curious coincidence, and I inclose a rough draft of the Scotch and Dutch coats-of-arms, that you may see the points of similarity and dissimilarity. I have some other investigations along the more immediate connections of the Steens and will some day hope to see you in the flesh, that we may go over the subject of mutual interest.

Yours very truly,

JAMES STEEN.

The following letter, from a prominent attorney in New York, will fully explain the Dutch coat-of-arms, including the Steen family in Holland:

NEW YORK, June 27, 1899.

My Dear Mr. Steen:

According to Rietstap, the authority on Dutch coats-of-arms, there are three families of Steen:

First.—Holland: Shield of gold, with eight-pointed red (vermilion) star, surmounted by a rose of same color.

Second.—Arnheim: Vermilion shield, with three triangular diamonds with gold edges. This has a crest—a gold jewel crown, ornamented with a triangular diamond; the scroll work (or lambrequins) of the crest, vermilion, silver and gold.

Third.—Holstein: Blue with a silver shell (pilgrim's cockle shell). This has a crest, two projections, or rays, of blue, each one containing three silver cockle shells, one on the other.

There are additional families of "Van den Steen." I thought this would interest you and your friend.

Yours sincerely,

GEORGE W. VAN SICLEN.

The coat-of-arms of the Scandinavian branch of the Steen family is the "Head, neck and breast of the Phœnix bird in gold."

Early in the eighteenth century several families of Steens removed from the North of Ireland to the British Colonies in America, settled in different localities, and have left a numerous posterity. Other families came at different times later on, and located in various portions of the country. They came with the great flow of population into the new country, which was mainly from the North of Ireland, and almost entirely Presbyterians; for the great Catholic-Irish immigration did not fairly commence until a much later period. "These people spread themselves rapidly, from 1725 to 1765, through a large portion of Eastern and Western Pennsylvania, and into North and South Carolina, becoming the basis of the Presbyterian Church in America;" and "constituting an element of the body politic second in value to no other, either in peace or war."

The writer remembers that when a mere child he heard his father speak of his Great-grandfather Steen and his large family. His name, we believe, was Richard Steen, but of this we can not be certain. Perhaps he came to the American Colonies with his children, but of this we have no record, and do not know. Of one thing, however, we may be sure, and that is, that he has left a very numerous posterity in this country. We think there can be no reasonable doubt but that Robert and Matthew Steen, who resided in Pennsylvania, and James and William Steen, who removed to South Carolina and were soldiers in the Revolutionary War, were all the sons of this man, and full brothers to each other. We were told in childhood that our great-grandfather, Robert Steen, had brothers who removed to South Carolina, and were soldiers in the Revolutionary Army.

The following persons by the name of Steen are recorded in the Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, as soldiers in Pennsylvania during the Revolutionary War:

James Steen enlisted as a private, April 28, 1776, in Captain John Marshall's company, in a rifle regiment. He was subsequently transferred to Captain Bentley's company. See Volume II, page 335, etc.; also Volume V, page 806, etc., Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series.

James Steen, the second, was a private in Captain Robert Cochran's company, 1781. See Volume V, page 389, Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series.

Robert Steen was mustered into the service August 15, 1776, as a private in Captain James Clark's company, Sixth Battalion, Fifth Class, Pennsylvania Militia, Colonel James Taylor, commanding, and he continued in the service during the whole of the Revolutionary War. He was also a private in Captain John Patton's company, and in Captain Morrison's company of the militia of Colonel Thomas Porter's Battalion of the Associaters of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, "destined for the camp in the Jerseys." The time of enlistment is given in Volume VII, instead of Volume V, of the Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series. See Volume V, page 707; Volume VII, page 583, and Volume VII, page 1066. At the close of the war Robert Steen was evidently a non-commissioned officer, as his name stood at the head of the list of privates in the report on the return of the militia company, 1782, Lieutenant Christ Roe, commanding. See Pennsylvania Archives, Volume V, Fifth Series, page 881.

Edward Steen enlisted April 17, 1777, as drummer in Continental Line, Second Regiment, from May 6, 1777, to 1781; also drummer in Continental Line, Seventh Pennsylvania Regiment. See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume III, page 284.

Edward Steen, the second, enlisted, at the age of sixteen years, October 15, 1783, a private in Major James Moore's company. See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume IV, page 785.

Andrew Steen was a private in Captain John Reed's company, "on the march to the Jerseys, July 24, 1776." See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume VII, page 342.

Frederick Steen was a private in Captain Alexander Lockord's company, Fourth Concord. See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume V, page 780, etc.

John Steen was a private in Captain Alexander Lockord's company, Fourth Concord. See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume V, page 780, etc.

William Steen was a private in Captain Alexander Lockord's company, Fourth Concord. See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume V, page 785, etc.

Alexander Steen was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, but no mention is made of his company or regiment. See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume VI, page 62—.

The following historical data were furnished by Miss Jean

Burns Martin, of Philadelphia, in 1912. She writes: "The Ellen Montgomery branch," from whom we Steens and Martins are all descended, and of whom the old heads of the family were so proud, I got from a note of my father's over thirty years ago. He wrote it to me, and I copied it from a note of my uncle, Alexander Martin, who was the greatest genealogist of the family. My great-uncle, Robert Steen, and my father followed closely with him in researches."

MONTGOMERYS AND MOORES.—Ellen Montgomery came from a titled family. Her father is supposed to be the Lord Montgomery whose son, dying childless, extinguished the male line. She was a woman of rare personal beauty and a sweet singer. But little is known of her ancestry, as she was the last of her family branch, and died comparatively young. But she was spoken of reverently by her children, who handed down her beauty, learning and good repute to her descendants. The Christian name of the Moore she married is supposed to be John; others assert it was James, as she distinctly had a son, James Montgomery Moore, and thus it is written:

Ellen Montgomery

John or James Moore.

Rachel Moore

afterward called Courtney.

Their children were:

1. Robert Steen, Philadelphia.
2. Ellen Steen—Mrs. William Martin. Born, lived and died at "The Vow."
3. Rachel Moore Steen—Mrs. J. Gill. Went to Philadelphia, afterward to Pittsburgh, Pa.
4. Katherine G. Steen—Mrs. Young. Removed to the Far West and lost sight of.

BURLINGTON, N. J., April 5, 1877.

In 1874 I copied from a printed circular sent by Dr. William Taylor, of Ballymoney, County Antrim, Ireland, to my brother, James Steen Martin, of Philadelphia, concerning the lands of Captain John Gallant estate, Barony of Kilconanay.

Captain John Gallant was one of the leading officers in Cromwell's army and one of the regimental agents to oversee the proper distribution of the attained lands among Cromwell's soldiers, and he was apportioned the following in Barony of Kilconanay, County Antrim, which had formerly belonged to Sir James McDonnell, second cousin to the then Marquis of Antrim. In 1665 the Marquis of Antrim was restored to his own lands, but his cousin, Sir James McDonnell, was obliged to go to Connaught, and his lands were settled on Captain John Gallant, viz. [profitable and unprofitable], in Ballingavoy, Maddy Keel, Maddy Duff, Shanaghy, Artiloman [home], Tanimatrack, Killens, Deserttrain [home of General Ross, of Revolutionary fame], Rosnashane, Lisnahunshin, Ballynacanon [home of Captain Moore], Cullytruman, Eden. Date of March 15, 1866.—Extract from the fifteenth report on the public records of Ireland, p. 1241125.

Captain Gallant's son, Benjamin, was high sheriff of County Antrim in 1702 and again in 1704, and Benjamin's youngest daughter, Ann, married Rev. Mr. Haltridge, Presbyterian minister of Finvoy and Resharkin. Mr. Haltridge's daughter married James McPeake, of Artnagross, father of the first Neil McPeake, of Ballymena, a justice of the peace and a Dublin solicitor. The said Neil McPeake married a daughter of the then Squire Adair, of Ballymena, and his son, Neil McPeake (second), was clerk of the peace many years. Neil McPeake's (senior) sister, Margaret, married William Robinson, of Carlduff, father of Neil Robinson, an able surgeon in the Royal Navy [I have seen him] and grandfather to Dr. William Taylor, of Ballymoney, and James Taylor, M.D., of Nicklen, and also John and Samuel Taylor, later of Philadelphia. He was also the great-grandfather of the Rev. Dr. John S. McIntosh, Presbyterian minister of May Street Church, Belfast. [Dr. McIntosh was afterward called to the Second Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.] The Rev. Haltridge's son married into the family of the Cartneys [formerly MacConegrin] and the Moores. [My Grandmother Martin (Rachel Moore) was a cousin to my grandfather, John Steen. Thus by Rachel Moore, the daughter of James Moore (brother of Rachel Moore, who married John Steen), who married Robert Martin, son of Rev. William Martin, and their son, William Martin, married Ellen Steen, of whom I, Alexander Martin, am their eldest son.] (Brackets and underlining are my own.)

A. MARTIN.

The heraldry of the Steens is a deer's head; that of the Martins a drawn sword, arm naked to the shoulders, the crest of safety fastened on the left wrist, and on that an anchor and a left-hand glove. Motto, "Dei et Pro Patria." This I received from the "Book of Heraldry" at Dr. James Taylor's home at Nicklen in 1843. The Steens from the Scotch; the Martins from the Welsh.

A. MARTIN.

In the printed circular sent from Ireland by Dr. James Taylor to James Steen Martin, and copied in 1874, there was an old family tradition that when Cromwell's army came to this locality (The Vow and Green Hill), this spot seemed to be more desirable than the rest, and the commanding officer wanted to give it to one of his chief favorites. But Captain Gallant objected, drew his sword, raised it, and said that through that sword he would obtain Green Hill. The commanding officer, fearing to lose one or perhaps both of these tried and brave men, gave it to Captain Gallant, but changed its name from Green Hill to "The Vow." [I add that in Artiloman the farm is still called by the name of Green Hill, and I was born there June 18, 1812. My father, William Martin, was born and died there at the age of eighty-seven years. Likewise his mother, Martha Moore Martin, was born and died there, aged seventy-eight years, and also her father, James Moore. And on part of this estate G. M. and G. F. Steen were also born and died. My brother, Robert S. Martin, lives there still (1877). It is still known as "Green Hill," and is also called "The Vow," of which it ("Green Hill") is a part.]

ALEXANDER MARTIN.

The sudden death from pneumonia, March 13, 1909, of James Steen, of Eatontown, N. J., has hindered us from receiving much information that would have been of interest to many in Ireland and completed this record of his branch of the family. He was a scholar, a historian, and deeply interested in the work, but his death cut short his investigations.

Just as we were ready for the press the following letter was received from Major Hugh B. Steen, of the medical service, now (1916) located at Bombay, India:

BOMBAY, March 27, 1916.

Dear Sir:

I have had forwarded to me your notice of the revised edition to be published by you of the "Steen Family." I do not know what origin you have discovered, but so far as I remember you thought the stock came over from Holland. Now, a few years ago, when in London, a Norwegian student, hearing I came from the North of Ireland, came up to me, as he was interested in the fact that I came from there, and asked about my people, and on informing him that most of us were blondes, he said it was remarkable, as a Steen, a Norwegian nobleman, had been exiled from Norway some centuries back and had gone or been sent to the North of Ireland. I was unable to pursue investigations further, as I left London next day. I have always been interested in this question, and even before meeting this student of history I have always thought that our (most likely) original home was in Norway.

I merely mention this little story, as you may have received no similar clue; but I imagine if this man's story were true that you would have no difficulty in getting at the true story from any professor of history in the Norwegian capital, and also dates and spelling of name, and crest or arms, etc. Their political history would, no doubt, give reasons for the exile, etc.

I think it would be a pity, if the story were true, that a new edition should be published before you found out more about this Norwegian question.

I am the third son of Mr. Robert Steen, of Balleney, Coleraine, Ireland.

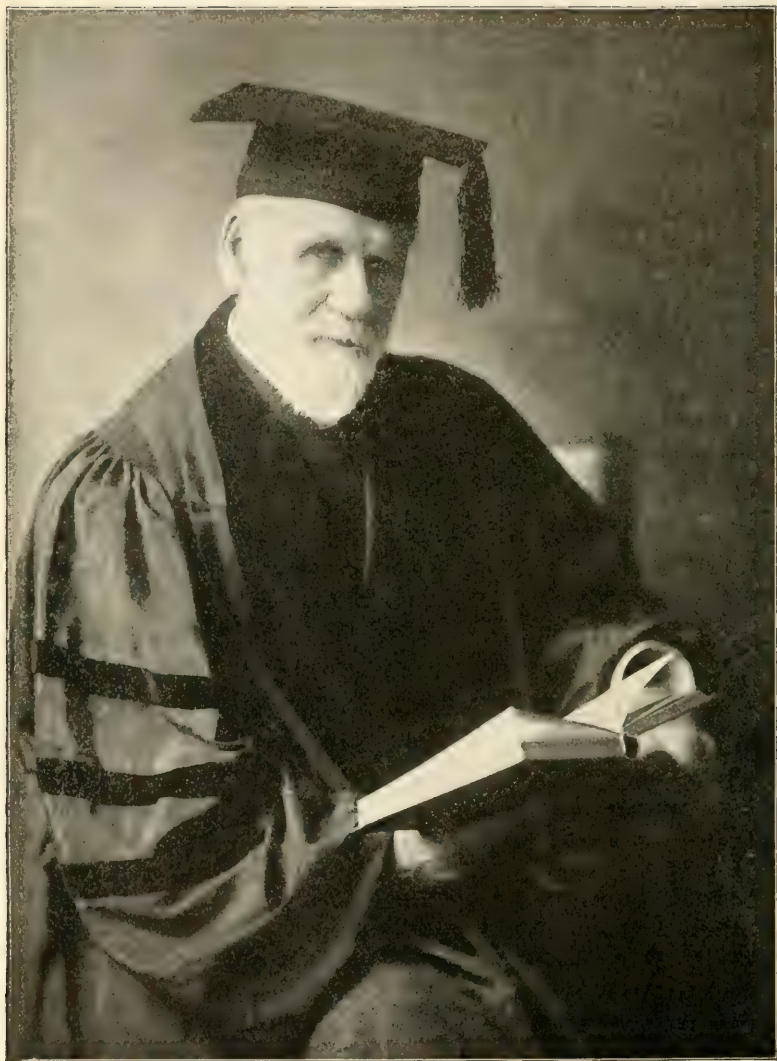

Yours sincerely,

H. B. STEEN.

Care of Messrs. Cox & Co., Agents.

The writer has written to Norway for information, but up to this time. (August, 1916) no reply has been received.

In the following pages we give first of all the record, so far as known, of JAMES STEEN, whose date of birth is the earliest definite date we have of any that belong to the branch of the family to which the writer belongs. We then in the books following present separate accounts of the closely-related families, devoting a "book," or a section of the work, to each. An interrogation point (?) after a name or date indicates doubt.

BOOK ONE

DESCENDANTS OF JAMES STEEN.

In the days of religious persecution in Scotland, near the close of the reign of Charles II, many Non-Conformists left Scotland in order to escape persecution and imprisonment. Among them there was a man by the name of STEEN, who had suffered much for his religious faith, and come into Ireland with Oliver Cromwell, the Scotts and Livingstons, Non-Conformist Scotch ministers. They settled first in Killinsky, in County Down, and afterwards located at Antrim, in the county of the same name. They were stanch Presbyterians of the Covenanter type, and continued to have representatives of the family in the ministry.

JAMES STEEN was of this branch of the Steen family, who came into Ireland about 1649. He was a descendant of a Scotch Covenanter minister, who was probably his grandfather. He was born in Antrim, County Antrim, and Province of Ulster, Ireland, in 1714, where he spent a long and useful life. He was married to a Miss Hollinger and brought up a large family. He was thrown from his buggy by a runaway horse, from the effects of which he died in 1796, in the eighty-second year of his age. He had a brother, an influential citizen, whose name was Alexander Steen, and who lived in the same locality. See Book Two.

To James Steen and his wife, formerly a Miss Hollinger, were born several children, one of whom was named Silas Steen, whose record is given below.

CHAPTER I.

Silas Steen, a son of James and — Hollinger Steen, was born in Antrim, in the county of Antrim, and Province of Ulster, Ireland, in 1757, where he continued to reside until his death, in 1827, aged about 70 years. He was married to Agnes Scott, about 1778, and brought up a family of five children.

I.—Jane Steen, the eldest child, a daughter of Silas and Agnes Scott Steen, was born in Antrim, County Antrim, Ireland, in 1779. She was married to James McNealy, and brought up a family of ten children, as follows:

1. James McNealy. 2. John McNealy. 3. Silas McNealy.
4. George McNealy. 5. Joseph McNealy. 6. ——— McNealy. 7. Nancy McNealy. 8. Jane McNealy. 9. Margaret McNealy. 10. Anne McNealy, who married a Mr. Bashford. To them were born at least two children, as follows:

I.—Charles Bashford, who lived in Scotland and died there.

II.—John Bashford, who married Rebecca Hughes. To them were born five children, as follows:

1. Margaret Bashford, who married a Mr. Cooper, who died. She was in 1900 a widow, residing in New York State.
2. Fannie Bashford, who married a Mr. Stokes, who died. She was in 1900 a widow, residing in Belfast, Ireland.
3. Jane Bashford, who married a Mr. Morton. To them were born at least three children, as follows, all of whom are now dead:
 - a. James Morton. b. William Morton. c. Joseph Morton.

4. Rebecca Bashford, who was in 1900 a teacher in New York State.

5. Agnes Bashford, who in 1900 lived in Belfast, Ireland,

II.—James Steen, the second child and eldest son of Silas and Agnes Scott Steen, was born in Antrim, Ireland, in 1781. He removed to America, about 1810, to join an uncle by the name of Scott, who was then an Adjutant General in the British Army, at Montreal, Canada. On the vessel in which he crossed the ocean was a family by the name of Campbell, with whom he became intimately acquainted, and afterwards married a daughter of this family. Her name was Sarah Campbell, called "Sallie." After the death of his uncle, he removed to Vicksburg, Mississippi, and thence to Natchez, Mississippi, or vice versa. We have no record of his children.

III.—Elizabeth Steen, the third child and second daughter of Silas and Agnes Scott Steen, was born in Antrim, Ireland, in 1784. She was married to Job Foster, and died in 1840, aged about 56 years. To Job and Elizabeth Steen Foster were born six children, as follows:

1. Anne Foster, who married a Mr. Magee.
2. Robert Foster.
3. Sophia Foster.
4. Jane Eliza Foster.
5. Margaret Foster.
6. Joseph Foster.

After the death of their mother, the younger children removed to England with their father.

IV.—Margaret Steen, the fourth child and third daughter of Silas and Agnes Scott Steen, was born in Antrim, County Antrim, Ireland, February 23, 1788. She was married by the Rev. Mr. Montgomery, of Antrim, Ireland, in June, 1816, to John Steen, a son of William and Mary Gill Steen, and a grandson of Alexander and Jane Stewart Steen. Hence Margaret Steen and her husband were both descended by different lines from the same great-grandfather Steen, and were second cousins. They continued to reside in Antrim, Ireland, as long as they lived. Margaret Steen died December 9, 1863, aged 75 years, 9 months and 18 days. John Steen was born in Antrim, Ireland, in February, 1787, and lived to a good old age. He was a noted singer in his day, having been trained in voice culture in England in his early years. He was precentor in a large church in Antrim for more than forty years. He had many tempting offers to go to other places, and sing in other churches of different denominations, but nothing could tempt him away. A writer, in speaking of him, says: "I only voice the sentiment of others when I say that I never heard such volume and sweetness of voice combined." To John and Margaret Steen were born nine children, and all brought up in the fear of the Lord.

1. Margaret Steen, the eldest child, a daughter of John and Margaret Steen, was born in Antrim, Ireland, June 9, 1818, and died in Belfast, Ireland, February 5, 1853. She was never married.
2. Anne Steen, the second daughter of John and Margaret Steen, was born in Antrim, County Antrim, and Province of Ulster, Ireland, January 20, 1820. She removed to America in 1857, resided for a time in San Francisco, and finally made her home with her sister, at 767 Alice Street, Oakland, California. She died May 25, 1893, aged 73 years, 4 months and 5 days. She was an amiable, devout, and useful Christian woman.
3. Dorothea Steen, the third daughter of John and Margaret Steen, was born in Antrim, Ireland, December 21, 1821, and died in Belfast, Ireland, October 19, 1852, aged 30 years, 10 months and 2 days.
4. Eliza Steen, the fourth daughter of John and Margaret Steen, was born in Antrim, County Antrim, in the Province of Ulster, Ireland, June 22, 1824, and died in Oakland, California, on Sabbath, December 10, 1899, in the full hope of a glorious resurrection. The funeral took place the following Wednesday, and her body was tenderly laid away to rest in the cemetery. She was married by the Rev. Mr. Early, in Antrim, Ireland, August 24, 1843, to John Johnson, and the same year removed to America. They were devout Christians and useful citizens. Family residence (1900), 767 Alice Street, Oakland, California. They are the parents of the following four children:
 - I.—John Steen Johnson, the eldest child, a son of John and Eliza Steen Johnson, was born in San Francisco, California, April 17, 1852. He was married, April 15, 1879, to Annie Neff Vanderslice. To them were born five children, as follows:

1. Milton Francis Johnson, the eldest child and only son of John Steen and Annie Neff Johnson, was born June 27, 1881.

BOOK TWO

DESCENDANTS OF ALEXANDER STEEN.

ALEXANDER STEEN was a descendant of a Scotch Covenanter minister who came into Ireland with Oliver Cromwell and others, about 1649, and located first in Killinsky, County Down, and afterwards at Antrim. He was born in the city of Antrim, county of Antrim, and Province of Ulster, Ireland, in 1716, where he spent a long and useful life. He had a brother, James Steen, who left a numerous, but now a very widely scattered, posterity. Both James and Alexander Steen were stanch Presbyterian Christians, and their children were all brought up in that faith. For the descendants of James Steen, in part, see Book One.

Alexander Steen was married to Jane Stewart, and brought up a family of seven children. He died from the effects of a gunshot wound, which he received as he was quietly sitting under an arbor in his own private garden, on the day of the battle of Antrim, in June, 1798, in company with his youngest son. He was eighty-two years old when he died. It was never known whether the shot that caused his death was intentional or merely accidental. Alexander Steen had nothing whatever to do with the political troubles of the times, but his friends felt it to be unsafe to investigate the matter, lest they should share a similar fate. Alexander Steen was an influential and useful citizen, and spent his whole life in Antrim, Ireland. To himself and wife were born the following seven children: William, Frances, John, Jane, James, Richard, and Mary Steen.

CHAPTER I.

William Steen, the eldest child, a son of Alexander and Jane Stewart Steen, was born in the city and county of Antrim, Ireland, in 1762, and died in 1825, aged 64 years. He was married, first, to Mary Gill, by whom he had six children. He was married a second time to Martha Johnson, by whom he had three children, making nine in all. Hence he has left a numerous posterity, now widely scattered throughout Europe, Australia, and America.

I.—Mary Steen, the eldest child, a daughter of William and Mary Gill Steen, was born in the city and county of Antrim, Ireland, in 1784, and died in 1854, aged 70 years. She was married, about 1808, to James Magee, by whom she had the following nine children:

1. William Magee, the eldest child, a son of James and Mary Steen Magee, was born about 1809, and died in 1849, during the epidemic in Belfast, aged about 40 years.
2. James Magee, the second son of James and Mary Steen Magee, was born about 1811, and died in Antrim, Ireland, in 1881, aged about 70 years.
3. John Magee, the third son of James and Mary Steen Magee, was born in Antrim, Ireland, about 1813, and removed from the place in early life.

Belfast, Ireland, during the epidemic plague in 1849, aged about 31 years.

II.—John Steen, the second child and eldest son of William and Mary Gill Steen (a grandson of Alexander and Jane Stewart Steen), was born in Antrim, Ireland, in February, 1787. He was married in Antrim by the Rev. Mr. Montgomery, of that place, in June, 1816, to Margaret Steen (a daughter of Silas and Agnes Scott Steen, and a granddaughter of James and —— Hollinger Steen), she having been born in Antrim, Ireland, February 23, 1788, and died December 9, 1863, aged 75 years. 9 months and 18 days. John Steen and Margaret Steen, his wife, were second cousins, both having descended by different lines from the same great-grandfather Steen, who was the son of a Scotch Presbyterian minister. They spent a long, happy and useful life in Antrim, where they were universally respected. John Steen was quite a noted singer in those days, having in early life received a thorough training in voice culture in England. He was the precentor of a large church in Antrim for more than forty years. He had many tempting offers to go and sing in other places, and in churches of different denominations, but nothing could entice him away. A voice of such richness, sweetness and volume combined, as he possessed, is very seldom found. To John and Margaret Steen were born the following nine children, all brought up in the fear of the Lord:

1. Margaret Steen, the eldest child of John and Margaret Steen, was born in Antrim, Ireland, June 9, 1818, and died in Belfast, Ireland, February 5, 1853, aged 44 years, 4 months and 4 days. She was never married.

Her funeral took place on Wednesday, December 13, and her body was tenderly laid away to rest until the resurrection morning. She was married in Antrim, Ireland, by the Rev. Mr. Early, of that place, August 24, 1843, to John Johnson. The same year of their marriage they removed to California, in the United States of America. For some time they resided in San Francisco, and afterwards located at 767 Alice Street, Oakland, California, where the family still resides (1900). DESCENDANTS OF JAMES STEEN.

JAMES STEEN was of Scotch descent, but was born in Ireland about 1734, probably at a place called "The Vow," in County Antrim, Province of Ulster. He came with a multitude of immigrants into the British Colonies of America near the middle of the eighteenth century along with his brothers, and perhaps his father's family. They landed in New York, but soon afterwards made their way into Pennsylvania, where they all continued to reside for a while. James Steen was probably a son of Richard Steen, whose ancestors came into Ireland about 1649 and settled first at Killinski, County Down, and afterwards located in County Antrim, where they had lived for several generations. They probably lived on the old "Green Hill farm," which is about eight Irish miles from Coleraine, near the bank of the River Bann, in County Antrim, Province of Ulster, and forms a part of the tract called "The Vow."

The writer visited the place in 1896 and found there an old lady whose mother was a Steen, and whose son, John Steen Martin, then cultivated the old farm. There is an old cemetery near the river, an old mill site, a few houses, and a school, which we visited; no postoffice, but the community is well served by rural free delivery. In the cemetery there is the grave of John Steen, who was born in 1755 and died February 14, 1835, and Catharine Steen, his wife, who was born in 1749 and died November 9, 1829.

The following familiar names also appear on tombstones at that place: John Boyd, died January 2, 1859; Elizabeth Boyd, died April 14, 1862, and several others of the same name, who were probably from the same ancestral family as Elizabeth Boyd, who married Robert Steen, and brought up her family in what is now Lancaster County, Pennsylvania.

James Steen removed to the South and permanently located in Union District, S. C. He was a man of great energy, a staunch Presbyterian in faith, and an enthusiastic patriot. At the breaking out of the Revolutionary War he joined the Colonial Army of Volunteers (Whig bordermen), attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and was killed in the battle of Kings Mountain, October 7, 1780, while fighting bravely in defense of his country, leading his comrades on to victory.

Lyman C. Draper, LL.D., in his "History of Kings Mountain and Its Heroës," pages 469, 470, has the following to say of Lieutenant-Colonel Steen:

"James Steen, also of Irish descent, was probably a native of Pennsylvania, and early settled in what is now Union County, South Carolina. In August, 1775, he was fully convinced and ready to sign the Continental Association, and doubtless led a company on the Snow campaign, as he did the following year against the Cherokees, and in 1777 commanded at Prince's Fort. In 1779 he served in Georgia, then at Stono and Savannah, and performed a tour of duty from November in that year till February, 1780, near Charleston. At this period he ranked as Lieutenant-Colonel, distinguishing himself at Rocky Mount, Hanging Rock, Musgrove's Mill, Kings Mountain, and probably with his superior, Colonel Brandon, at the Cowpens. In the summer of 1781, while endeavoring to arrest a Tory in Rowan County, North Carolina, he was stabbed by an associate, surviving only a week." *

It appears, however, that Dr. Draper was in error as to the time and cause of Lieutenant-Colonel Steen's death, as all records, traditional and otherwise, in possession of his descendants tend to prove that he "fell mortally wounded while leading a band of patriots in that great battle" (the battle of Kings Mountain), which records were submitted to the War Department by his descendants in 1909, a few months previous to the completion of the new battle monument, and accepted by the said department as satisfactory evidence of the fact that he was killed in the aforesaid battle, in consequence of which the War Department ordered his name inscribed upon tablet No. 2, among the list of those killed, giving him the title of "Lieutenant-Colonel," his being the second name upon the tablet, appearing immediately under that of Colonel James Williams.

* A sketch of Colonel James Steen's services is also found in "South Carolina in the Revolution," by McCrady, pages 1775-1780.

There is no good reason to doubt that Robert Steen, of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and James Steen, of Union District, S. C., were full brothers. James Steen was married in South Carolina to a Miss Bogard, by whom he became the paternal ancestor of a large branch of the Steen family residing in the Southern States. To James Steen and his wife were born the following children: William, Richard and James Steen.

CHAPTER I.

William Steen, the eldest son of Lieutenant-Colonel James Steen* and his wife (formerly a Miss Bogard), was born in Union District, S. C., about 1767 (?), in which locality he was brought up and resided until his death, which took place about 1820. He was married in about 1794 to Sarah Vance, a sister of Captain George Vance, of Union District, S. C., she having been born about 1773, and died at the home of her son, Colonel Gideon Steen, December 23, 1850, at the age of about 77 years. To them were born the following six children:

* Deed recorded December 4, 1787, in Book B, page 26, in County Clerk's Office, Union, S. C., as follows:

"Col. Thomas Brandon to William Steen, son of James Steen, tract of land situated in Union County, S. C."

(Col. Thomas Brandon was a companion-in-arms of Lieut.-Col. James Steen, and at times his superior officer.)

Gideon, Nirah, Jane, John Campbell, Thomas Jefferson and James William Steen.

I.—Gideon Steen, the eldest son of William and Sarah Vance Steen, was born near Unionville, Union District, S. C., March 5, 1796, and died on his own estate near Santuck, Union County, S. C., March 26, 1855. His boyhood days were spent on the farm, where he rapidly developed his mind as well as his body. His school advantages were limited, but his handsome appearance, industry, energy, manly character and graceful manners rendered him quite a general favorite. He was married near Union Courthouse, S. C., November 10, 1815 (family Bible has it 1813), to Naomi Townsend, a beautiful and accomplished young lady. Not long after their marriage they removed to the Indiana Territory, expecting to make it their future home, but the failure of his wife's health soon caused him to return to his old home in his native State, where they continued to live happily and prosperously until her death, May 13, 1851. With his noted energy and industry, Gideon Steen rapidly accumulated property and became one of the large land owners and slave owners in the district. He brought up a large family of children, and as each one married off he settled upon them valuable lands and several slaves. He had no political aspirations, but took great interest in the organized militia and was a Colonel of a regiment for many years. He was reported to have been a model Christian man, a pillar in the Presbyterian Church, a philanthropist, universally respected and honored for his sterling worth. The following obituary is quoted from The Unionville Journal (South Carolina) of March 30, 1856:

"Died at his residence in Union District, S. C., Col. Gideon Steen, in the sixtieth (60) year of his age. The deceased was a native of this district and spent nearly his whole life in it. He was well known. To those who knew him he needs no eulogist, his works praise him. His kindness, energy, integrity and fidelity must long be carried in the memories of those who have been associated with him. His grave must be watered by the tears of widows and orphans, for he was their steadfast friend. He had not only heart to feel for distress, but a hand to work. But, alas! his work is done. He is no longer among the living. He was a Christian. For more than twenty (20) years he had been a member of the Presbyterian Church at Cane Creek. May he rest in peace."

JAMES P. GOSSETT.

17.—James Pleasant Gossett, the fifth child and second son of Pleasant T. and Elizabeth Steen Gossett, was born September 23, 1860. "Young Gossett was brought up in the country; he was strong and robust and fond of athletic sports of all kind. His father at the time of the son's birth was a prosperous planter and slave owner, but he lost all in the war. The mother died in 1869 and the father in 1870, leaving eight children. Their property was sold at ruinous prices to satisfy pressing debts, in consequence of which the children were left homeless. This was during the trying days when the State was overrun by the negro and the carpetbagger, then by the Kuklux Klan, and later by the Federal troops; each at such times thought first of himself, and little provision was made for the destitute. There were no charitable institutions in which the orphans could take refuge and they were scattered among neighbors and relatives. James was assigned to Eli Bryant, a farmer near Glendale, Spartanburg County, to work until twenty-one years of age, at which time he was to receive 'a horse, bridle and saddle, and $50.00 bounty,' with no mention made as to the quality of the horse. The old man was unlearned, but a hardy and rugged yeoman, who by hard labor and economy had accumulated means. He rose before day and with plow in the field waited for light to run the furrow. Here he remained until the stars came out at night. The boy was with him, learning all kinds of farm work. He loved work and the fields, but longed for books and school. These to the old man were vain and hurtful. Realizing that if he were ever to be more than 'a hewer of wood and drawer of water' it must be by his own efforts, the boy pressed the old man time and again either to send him to school or release him. Both alternatives being refused, James deliberately and openly left, without a change of clothing or a cent in his pocket. He finally settled at Colerain, Union County, with C. P. Brown, an old friend of his father, who paid young Gossett $72, with 'board and washing,' for his first year's work. Mr. Brown was a prosperous merchant and planter and encouraged the boy's ambition and education. He aided him in saving, in three years, $100, with which sum the youth on January 1, 1878, entered the high school at Pacolet, S. C., under Professor L. B. Haynes. Though eighteen years old, James was assigned to class work with children of ten and twelve, but his determination to succeed overcame all obstacles. He bought provisions, hired his cooking done, and paid his own way with the proceeds of his earlier savings and of cotton raised while in school. In his teachers, especially Professor John G. Clinkscales, he found fast friends. In 1880 he secured a first-grade certificate to teach in Spartanburg County, and taught for three months with complete success. He then accepted a position as salesman in the store of Rogers & Clinkscales, of Williamston, S. C., remaining during 1880-1881. In 1882 he accepted a position as salesman and traveling agent with Wilkins, Poe & Co., of Greenville, S. C., remaining until 1886, when he entered the service of William Brice & Co., wholesale hardware merchants of New York City, as traveling salesman. Upon the death of Mr. Brice, in the fall of 1887, Mr. Gossett went with the Bay States Shoe and Leather Company, of New York City, traveling for them until 1902. He assisted in the organization of the Williamston Oil and Fertilizer Company, and served as its President from 1895 to 1902. In 1899 he organized the Bank of Williamston and became its President January 1, 1900. He also became President and Treasurer of the Williamston Mills December 14, 1901, both of which positions he still holds" (1907). (Quoted from "Men of Mark in South Carolina.")

In addition to the above Mr. Gossett is also President and Treasurer of The Brogon Mills, Anderson, S. C.; President and Treasurer of The Calhoun Mills, Calhoun Falls, S. C.; Vice-President of The Riverside and Tox-away Mills, Anderson, S. C., and Director of the Piedmont and Northern Railway. He is a Master, Royal Arch and Council Mason, a member of the South Carolina Bankers' Association, a member of the Executive Committee of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of South Carolina, a member of the Legislative Committee of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of South Carolina, and a member of the Board of Governors of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association. He is also a member of the following social organizations: New York Southern Society, New York; Poinsett Club and Country Club, Greenville, S. C., and Rose Hill Club, Anderson, S. C. Residence, "The Oaks," Williamston, S. C. He was married on November 20, 1883, to Miss Sallie Acker Brown, the eldest daughter of Dr. Benjamin F. and Sallie W. Brown, of Williamston, S. C. THE BATTLE OF KINGS MOUNTAIN.

The battle of Kings Mountain, in which both Lieutenant-Colonel James Steen and his brother, William Steen, participated, is looked upon by many historians as the most important battle of the Revolutionary War, and the turning point in a situation anything but favorable to the American cause. In this battle Lieutenant-Colonel James Steen fell while gallantly leading his command, in the very thickest of the fight, on to victory. And William Steen was severely wounded and taken prisoner; yet afterward, when the British were driven from the field, he was carried away by his friends, reached his home, lived for many years, but never fully recovered from his wounds. The great importance of the battle of Kings Mountain was owing not to the number of the men engaged nor the number of killed and wounded, but to the result, the changing of the plans of the enemy, and finally leading to the surrender of the British Army to General Washington.

The first part of the year 1780 was the darkest hour of the American Revolution. It was in this year that Benedict Arnold committed treason. At this time the paper currency issued by Congress and by the various States became valueless. A barber in Philadelphia, when Congress was in session, in a spirit of derision papered the walls of his shop with the currency of the country, and gloom and despondency spread like a pall over the land. The war had been going on for over four years and the end seemed farther off than at the beginning. And nowhere was the gloom so deeply felt as in the army. The soldiers were not only serving without pay, but were in destitution and want. They felt that the people, and especially Congress, were lacking in patriotism. Washington had been trying to get Congress to do something toward paying the amount long due to the soldiers, but without any sort of success. He was unable to get sufficient aid even to maintain them. He wrote to his wife in January, 1780: "The troops, both officers and men, have been almost perishing with want." Lafayette wrote to his wife: "Human patience has its limits. No European army would suffer the tenth part of what the Americans suffer." "It takes citizens to support hunger, nakedness, toil and total want of pay, which constitutes the condition of our soldiers." South Carolina and Georgia were completely in the possession of the British, and a border warfare between the Tories and the Whigs was both malignant and persistent. Many of the Whigs left the country, going into the mountains of Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia. Squads of them formed, and whenever possible they would attack Ferguson's or Tarleton's smaller marauding bands; but the advance of these two dashing officers had become serious. They had overrun and were stripping the country of its property. Ferguson sent out a proclamation telling the people to come in and take British protection, or he would visit every locality with fire and sword and hang the disloyal. This aroused the patriots to immediate and earnest action. The leaders of all the clans met for consultation September 25, 1780, and started on a march toward Ferguson, whose men had robbed and burned until many had a personal grievance to avenge. They began their march with little baggage to encumber them, having a blanket, a cup and a wallet of provisions, consisting principally of parched cornmeal mixed with maple sugar. Touched with the religious solemnity peculiar to the "ironsides," they adopted as their password, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon." Their march continued for days over mountain passes until horses began to give way, and some of the men could not stand the diet and sickness decimated their ranks. But this band of patriots still pushed on in the line of Ferguson's retreat, although there was but little for man or beast to live upon. They continued the march until they reached Cowpens, afterward made famous as the battleground where Tarleton defeated General Greene. A selection of the fittest men and horses was made to rush on with all speed; all the footmen were behind. Their number seems to have been nine hundred and ten, yet the Whig army is thought to have numbered twelve hundred and the British eleven hundred. They marched on all night and reached Kings Mountain at three o'clock p. m. A plan of battle was immediately formed, a simultaneous attack on all sides. The part of the mountain occupied by Ferguson was of oblong shape, about six hundred yards long and two hundred and fifty yards wide, and its summit about sixty feet above the surrounding country. Colonel Shelby's regiment was to take a position directly opposite to that of Campbell's and form the left center, Campbell's left and Shelby's right coming together. Beyond Shelby was Williams' command, including Brandon, Hammond and Chandler; then the South Carolinians under Lacy, Hathorne and STEEN, with the remainder of the Wilkes and Surrey men under Cleveland, together with the Lincoln troops under Cronicle and Hambright. All under the command of Colonel Cleveland. Thus arranged they marched to their respective places, and before going into battle Colonel Cleveland made a brief speech to his men, in part as follows: "When engaged you are not to wait for the word of command from me. I will show by example how to fight. I can undertake no more. Every man must consider himself an officer and act from his own judgment. If any of you are afraid, such shall have leave to retire, and they are requested to immediately take themselves off." One man, John Judd, expressed a desire to remain behind "to hold the horses." The deadly conflict continued for more than an hour, when Ferguson's officers advised him to surrender, but having a contempt for the untrained soldiers opposing him, he declined. Soon, however, he discovered that further resistance was a sacrifice of life without any hope of success. He summoned a few of his officers, and they attempted to cut their way out, but the mountaineers would not have it so. Pierced by not less than half a dozen balls, he fell from his horse. The battle was over. The great British commander was dead. His rangers, who were as valiant as the tenth legion, still fought, but they now numbered but few. De Peyster rallied the remaining forces and retreated behind the wagons for protection, but the patriots were on all sides of them and there was no escape. He finally raised the white flag. The mountaineers, whose homes had been burned, their property taken and their kinfolk hanged, fought with desperation and achieved a glorious victory. More than four hundred British were killed and seven hundred were captured. The American patriots lost seventy-five killed and more than one hundred wounded. This battle changed the plan of the British campaign. It gave hope to the country and time for Washington to get reinforcements from the French in both men and money. Kings Mountain, like Bunker Hill, is a monument to the citizen soldier. It turned the tide of the Revolution. It gave hope to the despondent and courage to the weak. It was to the patriotic what the first glimpse of the rising sun is to the weary watcher of the night. As soon as Lord Cornwallis heard of it he began a hasty retreat into South Carolina. It taught the British generals to fear the mountaineers and delayed the execution of the plan to push from the South through Virginia to the North. This delay gave Washington time to confer with Count Rochambeau, who was in command of the French troops at Newport, and plan and prepare a joint campaign. Count Rochambeau sent a message to Count de Grosse, who was in command of a French fleet in the West Indies, summoning him at once. It was a response to this order that brought the French fleet to Yorktown, with thirty-five hundred land troops under St. Simon, which enabled Washington with these reinforcements to compel Lord Cornwallis to surrender the British army, and thus secure American independence. Thus we see how important to this country was the battle of Kings Mountain, and how important to that battle were the services of Lieutenant-Colonel James Steen and his brother, William Steen.

BOOK FOUR

DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM STEEN.

WILLIAM STEEN was a descendant of a Scotch Covenanter minister. He was born, probably at a place called "The Vore," in County Antrim, Province of Ulster, Ireland, about 1738, and along with a multitude of other immigrants, his brothers, and probably his father's family, came into the British Colonies in America about 1755. They landed in New York, but soon afterward came into Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, where they continued to reside for a time. William Steen located permanently in Union District, South Carolina, near the Great Broad River. He was married to Nancy Lusk about 1772, and brought up a family of eleven children in Union District, South Carolina. William Steen was probably a son of Richard Steen (?), whose ancestors came into Ireland with Oliver Cromwell about 1649, and located first at Killinsky, County Down, and afterward in County Antrim, where they had lived for several generations. William Steen was a farmer by occupation, a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and was wounded and taken prisoner in the battle of Kings Mountain, October 7, 1780. He was soon afterward rescued from the British by a band of American soldiers, among whom was Jacob Neely, whose granddaughter, Margaret Ann Neely, afterward married his grandson, Carroll Jeffries Steen, in Rankin County, Mississippi. The following report was sent to the writer by one of his descendants. When William Steen was wounded, his wife and three children were in a fort for safety, sixty miles away. One of the children had just died, and at that time lay a corpse. As soon as Mrs. Steen heard of the calamity she procured a horse, and, leaving her dead child with her friends, proceeded at once in great haste to her husband. It was late in the afternoon, and she had to travel all alone along the dreary road that sad and gloomy night, and did not reach his side till after daylight the next morning. This brave and heroic act shines in the family until this day as characteristic of them. They are not only politically but religiously enthusiastic and patriotic. Mrs. Steen was a very energetic and intelligent woman, and lived to be eighty-eight years of age. She used to relate to her grandchildren many interesting accounts of the trials and hardships of those early struggles and conflicts during the Revolutionary War. One of her grandchildren writes: "She was as true a Christian as the world affords." Several years after the close of the Revolutionary War William Steen started to remove with his family from South Carolina to Mississippi, stopping for a time in Carroll County, Tennessee, where he was taken sick and died. Not long after his death his wife and all her children, except three, resumed their journey and went on to Lawrence County, Mississippi, where they afterward resided. After their father's death John Steen returned to South Carolina, Sarah Steen married Thompson Enochs and remained in Tennessee, and Jane Steen married Levi Noble and removed to Texas. Five of the children of William Steen were among the early settlers and influential citizens of Rankin County, Mississippi. All were farmers, and brought up large families. One son located in Holmes County, Mississippi, and another near Hazlehurst, Copiah County, Mississippi. This large family of William Steen has left a numerous posterity. One of the grandsons writes concerning his own family as follows: "We have ten children and thirty-seven grandchildren. My father had cousins in Alabama. There is a large number of Steens in Chickasaw County, Mississippi, and a number of Steens were in Knox County, Indiana, fifty years ago, cousins to my father. I think it would be a difficult task to count the descendants of the original Steens who came into this country from Ireland. I am almost inclined to think that they are like the descendants of Abraham for multitude. They are also remarkable for strong constitutions. I have never heard of a consumptive or dyspeptic one. I think we should justly be proud of the name of Steen. I have never known one who failed to pay his honest debts. They are remarkable for reverence, hospitality, charity, and industry; and among this large number I have never known or heard a breath of suspicion in regard to their moral character."

Captain Isaac V. Enochs, of Terry, Miss., another grandson of William Steen, in 1893 wrote as follows:

"I have some reputation for an extraordinary memory. I feel surprised at the distinctness with which memory photographs my old grandmother, as she and my mother coddled together over their domestic work, and grandmother, with her quaint Gaelic expressions and brogue, recounted to my mother the history that I now see reached back into the centuries. I can even see myself as I lay around with my heels up and drank down curiosity — feeling such stimulating draughts — as she told of the transatlantic history of her old uncles, and great-uncles and aunts. As I remember, the Steens and Lusks were pure Orange Irish and Presbyterians, while their English cousins, the Hays, were Welsh. My Grandfather Steen was wealthy when he was married. I have often seen a little unique trunk, or strong box, covered with ox hide, holding something over a gallon, which he placed in his wife's keeping, filled with English guineas, but the old stronghold impressed my young imagination with the 'what might have been.' When the Revolutionary War had closed, and grandpa was dead, his property was reduced to the ownership of one negro woman, 'Milly,' whom grandfather had purchased in my mother's name the evening after he had accidentally clipped off the fingers of her right hand with a broad-axe. And just here hangs an example of Irish generosity, in this, that this woman and her progeny were passed back into the estate. Thus it happened that the number of her children corresponded with the number of grandma's children, so that each had a negro to begin life with, and they all, except Uncle Thompson and Aunt Sallie Enochs, afterward became thrifty slave owners. A history of the Steens without their connection with the Enochs would be like a three-wheeled wagon. The old families were related through the Hays, or Hayes. I am not sure about the orthography. My Grandmother Steen's mother was a Hays. My Grandmother Enochs' mother was a Hays, she and grandfather being related, I don't know how, through the Hays. It is the General Jackson Hays. General Harry Hays, of New Orleans, and his still more celebrated brother, Jack Hays, who killed on the streets of San Francisco its then marshal, were grandsons of my grandmother's brother. This was the connecting link between the old Steens and Enochs, or Enos, as it was in old German, or more recent English history. My great-grandfather, Enoch Gabriel Enos, was a round-headed Welshman, and a follower of Cromwell. He made himself too conspicuous — a well-known family trait. And right here let me compare the distinguishing characteristics of the connecting families. The Enochs are willful, aggressive, while the Steens are won'tful, cautiously stubborn. It has been said of your correspondent that he has all the aggressiveness of the Enochs and the stubbornness of the Steens, minus their caution. In the decapitation of Charles II, and after the fall of his great leader, my grandfather, Gabriel Enochs, smuggled his way with the Hays (who were British sailors) across the Atlantic and hid himself away in the mountains of Southwest Virginia and North Carolina till the Revolutionary War was well under way. My Grandfather and Grandmother Steen came from Ireland, and lived near the line of North and South Carolina. Thither my great-grandfather went when he dared, and the two related families were raised up together. And when the young State of Tennessee began to come into notice, both families migrated thither, except the eldest son of each, and were raised up in the shadow of the Hermitage, each feeling proud of the blood of its hero and central figure. I remember with zest the accounts my father and uncles used to give of their fun with the Crocketts, and the pride they had in the denouement of the only break that ever existed in a lifelong relation between the Crocketts and our family. There were so many more of our folks than of the Crocketts, the whole trouble was to be settled by Uncle Thompson Enochs and David Crockett knocking it out in a single fight; but when 'Bill' Crockett saw that Uncle Thompson was getting the best of it, he brought on an additional scrimmage with my father. Of course, they used to tell us the Crocketts got the worst of it. I have never heard the Crockett version of the affair. This I know, however, that the old men shed sincere tears when David Crockett fell at the Alamo. When grandpa had been gone to the war nearly two years, getting a furlough to return, he was shot through the body when within two miles of home. The Tory neighbors, knowing the sorrow that was already in that home, placed him upon a litter and took him to his already-distressed family. 'Polly' was dead and laid upon the cooling board. 'Can a mother forget her offspring?' I have heard grandmother say: 'Yes, when I saw the greater sorrow — it was now 4 p. m. — I caught up Polly's body and laid it upon a clothes shelf in the back room. The next morning, at 9 o'clock, I wanted clothes that were upon that shelf, and found my dead child that I had forgotten till then.' Grandpa survived the wounds, but was never well. Grandma kept as a memento — and I have seen — the red bandanna kerchief that she and her Tory neighbors, without a doctor, drew through his body, in accordance with the vulgar idea of the surgery of that period. Silas Steen, the youngest son, died in 1857, aged about fifty-six years, which would indicate that grandpa lived into the present century." Captain Enochs concludes a communication of many pages as follows: "One more morsel I will give you in pride, and I can say just pride. Five weeks ago I spent a Sunday and night with my afflicted double cousin, Carroll J. Steen, who has recently lost the wife of his youth. 'Cousin Isaac,' said he, 'I regard our family, taken as a whole, as a wonder. You and I can trace them over a century, count them by name by the hundreds, and yet not one of them ever came in contact with the laws of his country for a mean thing. No woman ever failed to make a good wife, and not a breath of suspicion ever marred her good name; and while none have reached extraordinary wealth, all have been good livers.' But you are tired; so is my hand.

"Terry, Mississippi.

ISAAC V. ENOCHS."

William Steen was married in South Carolina, near the Great Broad River, about 1772, to Nancy Lusk, she having been born in Ireland and died in Mississippi. To them were born eleven children, all born and brought up in South Carolina. Their names were: John, Mary, called "Polly"; James, Sarah, called "Sally"; Nathaniel, Elias, Robert, William, Mary (2d), called "Polly"; Jane, and Silas.

CHAPTER I.

John Steen, the eldest son of William and Nancy Lusk Steen, was born in South Carolina, near the Great Broad River, about 1774. He was an industrious and prosperous farmer, and made his home in South Carolina until his death. He was married in South Carolina to a Miss Jeffries, who came from Virginia into that State. They were the parents of eight children, two sons and six daughters, as follows:

I.—William Hays Steen, a son of John and ——— Jeffries Steen, and a grandson of William and Nancy Lusk Steen, was born in South Carolina April 24, 1800, and brought up on his father's farm. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Lusk, a kins-girl and a protege of his father. They removed to his plantation, near Paris, LaFayette County, Miss., where they brought up a family of eight children. At the time of his death, in 1872, William Hays Steen was a wealthy cotton planter. His wife, Elizabeth Lusk Steen, survived him sixteen years and died in 1888. William H. Steen was a man of substantial character and was known as "the 'Squire'" all through that region. His habits were quiet and studious, and he was much respected by his neighbors and loved by his slaves. His plantation is still cultivated by these slaves and their descendants to a very large degree. No white man has ever resided on it since his death. A grandson writes that he was an ideal grandfather, as they all thought. He was a most indulgent master and would never allow an overseer to whip a slave; and in consequence of this he did not accumulate property as fast as some others. The old black "mamma," Marie, who nursed his children, died on the plantation in 1897, having survived both her master and mistress. The old negro carriage driver was still living on the plantation a few years ago. He patterned after his master, and "Wesley" Steen was known all through that country as a most upright Christian man. He has been very prosperous and owns and operates a steam gin mill, which he built out of his own resources on the farm. He asked for no lease and made no purchase, but put his own improvements on the farm in the supreme confidence that "the children," as he called the Bryants, would never work a hardship on him or on his. He often goes to see them, and often talks about "Massa Billy" and "Miss Betsy." He is remarkably well preserved and only beginning to show gray. To William Hays and Elizabeth Lusk Steen were born the following children:

- i. Margaret Elizabeth Steen, daughter of William Hays and Elizabeth Lusk Steen, was born on her father's plantation, near Paris, LaFayette County, Miss., February 4, 1834, and died December 26, 1884, aged 50 years, 10 months and 22 days. She was married in LaFayette County, Mississippi, in 1859, to Dr. Alfred Alexander Bryant, the second son of John W. Bryant, of Westmoreland County, Virginia, he having been born April 2, 1829, and died April 4, 1893, aged 64 years and 2 days. Dr. Bryant's elder brother was Judge John W. Bryant, of Marshall, Mo. To Alfred Alexander and Margaret Elizabeth Steen Bryant were born the following four children:

I.—Edgar Eugene Bryant, the eldest child, a son of Dr. Alfred A. and Margaret E. Steen Bryant, was born near Paris, Miss., December 9, 1861, and died, unmarried, in Coffeerville, Miss., December 11, 1909, aged 48 years and 2 days. He was graduated with first honor from the literary department of the University of Mississippi, then graduated in law in Nashville, Tenn., and Washington, D. C. For more than eight years he was Judge of the Circuit Court in Fort Smith, Ark.; was a candidate for Chief Justice in 1892 and a candidate for Governor in 1898. He had a large practice at the bar in Fort Smith, Ark., and was interested in railroad development. He was delegate for the State at large to the last three National Democratic Conventions previous to his death. He was a director of the Birmingham Dry Goods Company, President of the Bryant & Shackleford Company, and director of one or two railroad and mining enterprises. Up to the time of his death he owned and cultivated the old "Steen Plantation," in Calhoun County, Mississippi.

He is President of the Birmingham Dry Goods Company, a wholesale dry goods house in Birmingham, Ala., owned by himself and his brothers and sister. He is Secretary and Treasurer of the Bryant & Shackleford Company, owned entirely by the Bryants, at Water Valley, Miss., and a director of the Coffeetown Bank, at Coffeetown, Miss. He owns and manages several farms in the State, and owns solely, or in partnership with his brothers and sister, large property interests in Water Valley, Miss., Fort Smith, Ark., in Texas, and in Denver, Col. Clarence V. Beadles is a planter, cotton buyer, Vice-President of the Coffeetown Bank, director of the Birmingham Dry Goods Company, Bryant & Shackleford Company, and owns large bodies of land, one of his farms having been entered and owned by President James K. Bryant, 2d, is a director in the Bryant & Shackelford Company, a stockholder in the Birmingham Dry Goods Company and in the Coffeeville Bank, and owns a large plantation near Coffeeville, Miss. After the death of his father, in 1892, he purchased the home in Coffeeville formerly owned by his father, the finest residence in the place, in which he resides with his family. To Alfred Alexander and Clara Rice Carr Bryant were born the following children:

1. Alfred Alexander Bryant, 3d, the eldest child of Alfred A. and Clara Rice Carr Bryant, was born in Coffeeville, Miss., September 24, 1901.

He was a moderately successful merchant for fifty-five years, and afterward retired to his small farm. He was a devoted Christian and member of the Baptist Church. He wrote his family history in 1891. John V. Steen was married in Greensboro, Miss., August 23, 1843, to Miss Elizabeth Margaret Acee, and brought up a family of children, whom he has educated and taught to succeed.

About 1814 they removed to Mississippi, and were among the first settlers in Lawrence County, where they brought up their family and acquired considerable property. It is said that when he died, in 1843 or 1844, James Steen was the largest slave owner in his county. To James and Sarah Steen were born eleven children, as follows:

Sarah Steen, called "Sallie," a daughter of William and Nancy Lusk Steen, was born near the Great Broad River, in South Carolina, in 1783, and removed with her parents to Tennessee when that young State began to come into prominence. She was married in Tennessee to Thompson Enochs, a son of Enoch and Lydia Enochs, and continued to reside in Carroll County, Tennessee. Sarah Steen Enochs was the mother of twelve children, and has left a numerous posterity. One of her children was Miles Enochs, who married and had one child, named Francis Enochs, who never married, and died in 1867, worth over $120,000. Edgar Enochs, who lives in Benela, Calhoun County, Miss., strongly resembles the old Steen family. He was a Mexican War veteran, was for many years the sheriff of that county; was twice a member of the Mississippi Legislature; was a Major in the Fourth Mississippi Regiment in the Civil War, and has a large family. Two sons of Sarah Steen Enochs still reside in Carroll County, Tennessee—Gabriel and Isaac Enochs; and one son of the latter, Dr. William Enochs, is a popular physician in Jackson, Tenn.

CHAPTER V.

Nathaniel Steen, son of William and Nancy Lusk Steen, was born in South Carolina, near the Great Broad River, about 1786. He was married and removed from Lawrence to Madison County, Mississippi, where he died. He had two sons, and at last accounts a granddaughter of his, Mrs. Ella McWright, was living at Glenmora, La.

I.—Thomas Jefferson Steen, a son of Nathaniel Steen, and a grandson of William and Nancy Lusk Steen, was born and lived in Lawrence County, Mississippi. During the Civil War he became a Major-General in the Western Division of the Confederate Army. The old people used to say that when he was a boy, no more three break-neck boys ever lived than he and his two cousins, William C. Enochs and Levi Noble, who also became a Major-General in the Trans-Mississippi Department of the Western Army of the Confederate States. There was no form of break-neck fun that these boys would not undertake. Captain Enochs writes as follows:

"Imagine Uncle Robert's butting ram, well trained by them! Sunday morning comes; lots are cast as to who shall have the post of honor, when the ram is to get the worst of it. My mother's rice pot is stolen out of the kitchen for a helmet, and the trap is set for his royal sheepship, who is cautiously driven into the snare. The fortunate champion is squatted on all fours, with the pot well wadded with moss where it pressed upon the hero's shoulders. The plot thickens and the propitious moment comes. Ram-y sees something worth butting. Bim!! Aunt Polly's rice pot is in a hundred pieces and a limber champion in the lane; but his head was too hard for the pot or the ram's horns. Life comes back into him, and two wars since then have found him in the thickest of the fight, and nine years have been added to his allotted time."

II.—Nathaniel Steen, the second son of Nathaniel Steen, and a grandson of William and Nancy Lusk Steen, was born and brought up in Lawrence County, Mississippi. He died in Monticello, Miss., August 2, 1827. He was married to Mary Collins, a sister to Robert Steen's wife. After his marriage Nathaniel Steen removed to near Sharpsburg, Madison County, Miss., where his wife died April 27. To them were born the following children:

1. David Steen, who went to Texas when young, and was not afterward heard from by the family.
2. Jefferson Steen, who married and removed to Fairfield, Tex., where he brought up a large family.
3. Thomas Collins Steen, the third and youngest son of Nathaniel and Mary Collins, was born near Monticello, Miss., December 12, 1816. He was married to Eliza Ann Lambert December 17, 1839, and died near Sharpsburg, Madison County, Miss., January 5, 1881. His wife died at the same place. To Thomas Collins and Eliza Ann Lambert Steen were born the following children:

I.—Nathaniel Jefferson Steen was born in Madison County, Mississippi, October 24, 1840. He was married to Mittie Ward November 28, 1866, and died November 25, 1868. To them was born one son:

1. Guy Ward Steen, who died January 23, 1871.

Thomas Enoch Steen, the tenth and youngest child and the only son of Carroll Jeffries and Margaret Ann Neely Steen, was born twelve miles south of Brandon, near Cato, Rankin County, Miss., November 3, 1871, and brought up on his father's large plantation. Being the only son, it fell to his lot to oversee much of the work. His ambition was to be a physician, but if that became impossible, then he wanted to be a machinist. A few months after his father's death, in 1897, the announcement was made of the discovery of gold in Alaska. He determined to go, and as none of his friends would consider the matter of going with him, he had to go alone. He went to Jackson and bought a ticket to Seattle, Wash., where he secured an outfit and a ticket to Skagway, Alaska. From there he went down the Pelley to the Yukon River, shooting the rapids on all the streams, and, on the whole, living a strenuous outdoor life. He went on to Dawson City, and for a season tried life within the Arctic Circle. Unfortunately, an accident compelled him to return for hospital treatment. From Victoria, B. C., he went to Washington, and his determination to work at something kept him in money enough to get along. His love of machinery kept him around the shops, and learning very fast, he soon commanded good wages. Finally he went to work for the Northern Pacific Railway at Missoula, Mont. He kept at it until he was promoted to engineer, at which he worked only about ten months. Then he saw an opportunity where he could get a good medical education. He dropped everything and spent four years in hard work to obtain it. He was graduated from the University of Tennessee at Nashville, and also from the medical department of the same institution. On May 1, 1911, he received his diploma in medicine and went back to the home of his ancestors, who had planted the first white settlement in what is now the land of four counties, where he began the successful practice of medicine. CHAPTER XI.

Silas Steen, the eleventh and youngest child of William and Nancy Lusk Steen, was born in Union District, South Carolina, near the Great Broad River, about 1799 or 1800, and died at Steen's Creek, in Rankin County, Mississippi, October 24, 1858. His father started to remove with his family from South Carolina to Mississippi, but remained a while in Carroll County, Tennessee, where he sickened and died. BOOK FIVE DESCENDANTS OF ROBERT STEEN.

ROBERT STEEN was a lineal descendant of a Scotch Covenantanter minister, a refugee from religious persecution, who came into Ireland with Oliver Cromwell and others about 1649, and located first at Killinsky, County Down, and afterward settled in County Antrim, where his descendants continued for several generations. Robert Steen was one of a large number of immigrants who came over into the British Colonies in America from the North of Ireland near the middle of the eighteenth century. He was probably one of the younger sons of Richard Steen (?), who was born about 1700 (?), and perhaps came to America with his large family, and with other relatives and friends, to make their future home in this new country, about the year 1755. They belonged to a race of men of strong convictions, resolute purposes, and had already endured hardships for the sake of their religious principles. They determined to brave the ocean in those frail little sailing vessels of the times; bear the trials of frontier life; the deprivations incident to a new country; the struggles and difficulties necessary to fell the forest, and build homes for themselves and families in the new world. They landed in New York, but soon afterward made their way into Pennsylvania, where, free from the depredations of the Indians, they would have a better opportunity to secure their own lands and provide the necessities of life with less of danger and more of comfort to themselves. In the large family of Richard Steen (?) there were several sons, among whom were James and William, who located permanently in Union District, South Carolina, and each became the paternal ancestor of a large branch of the Steen family residing in the Southern States; while Robert and Matthea settled in Pennsylvania, and each has left a numerous posterity, now very widely scattered.

Robert Steen was born about 1740 (?) and most likely on the old "Green Hill" farm, which is about eight Irish miles from Coleraine, near the bank of the River Bann, in County Antrim, Province of Ulster, Ireland, and forms a part of the tract called "The Vow." The writer visited the place in 1896 and found there an old lady whose mother was a Steen, and whose son, John Steen Martin, then cultivated the old farm. There is an old cemetery near the river, an old mill site, a few houses, and a school, which we visited; no postoffice, but the community is well served by rural free delivery. In the cemetery there is the grave of John Steen, who was born in 1755 and died February 14, 1835, and Catherine Steen, his wife, who was born in 1749 and died November 9, 1829. The familiar names also appear on tombstones, as follows: John Boyd died January 2, 1859; Elizabeth Boyd died April 14, 1862, and several others of the same name, who were probably of the same ancestral family as Elizabeth Boyd, who married Robert Steen, who came to the British Colonies while young.

Robert Steen was married to Miss Elizabeth Boyd, and established his home near what is now Chestnut Level, in Lancaster County, Pa., not far from the Susquehanna River, where he brought up a family of three sons and two daughters in comfortable circumstances. He lived to a good age, but the date of his death is not known to the writer. He was a man of influence, a devout Presbyterian Christian, a successful farmer and a patriotic citizen. At the breaking out of the Revolutionary War he joined the Colonial Army of Volunteers in Pennsylvania, and continued in the service until American independence was secured. He was mustered into the service August 15, 1776, as a private in Captain James Clark's company, Sixth Battalion, Fifth Class, Pennsylvania Militia, Colonel James Taylor, commanding. He was also a private in Captain John Patton's company, and in Captain Morrison's company of the militia of Colonel Thomas Porter's Battalion of the Associaters of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, "destined for the camp in the Jerseys." The time of enlistment is given in Volume VII, instead of Volume V, of the Fifth Series of the Pennsylvania Archives. (See Volume V, page 707; Volume VII, page 583, and Volume VII, page 1066.) Robert Steen was evidently a non-commissioned officer at the close of the Revolutionary War. His name stood at the head of the list of privates in the report at the return of the militia company of Easton, 1782, Lieutenant Christ Roe, commanding. (See Volume V, Fifth Series, Pennsylvania Archives, page 881.) Robert Steen was a fine singer and especially fond of music and good society. The following are the names of his children: Samuel, Robert, Mary, Elizabeth and Alexander.

CHAPTER I.

Samuel Steen, the eldest son of Robert and Elizabeth Boyd Steen, was born near Chestnut Level, in Lancaster County, Pa., about 1760 (?), and was brought up on his father's farm. He was an intelligent, industrious and successful farmer. He removed to Berkeley County, Virginia, where he was married to Miss Mary Mayers, probably about 1790 (?), and brought up a large family of eleven children. He was a man of influence and usefulness in society; a strict Presbyterian, who faithfully read the Bible, kept the Sabbath, observed family worship, and was habitual and regular in his attendance upon the ordinances and services of public worship in the sanctuary. Late in life he removed with his wife and family to Belmont County, Ohio, and located upon a farm near St. Clairsville, where they spent the remainder of their lives, highly respected by all.

About 1850 all, or nearly all, of their children, together with their families, were living in that region, but now the children of Samuel and Mary Mayers Steen are all dead, and their families are very widely scattered.

I.—Alexander Steen, son of Samuel and Mary Mayers Steen, was born in Berkeley County, Virginia, in January, 1800, and removed with his parents to the farm near St. Clairsville, Belmont County, Ohio. He afterward lived in Franklin County, Pennsylvania, and in 1856 removed to Washington County, Illinois, where he located upon a farm, and where he died Sep-

He was ordained by the Presbytery of Kittanning in 1873, and served in the ministry of the Presbyterian Church for forty-one years. He was a fine type of a Christian gentleman, possessed of excellent social qualities, a great student, an able preacher, a faithful pastor, a man greatly

She also remembers her "Aunt Jane," and "Aunt Elizabeth" (called Lizzie), who lived in Pittsburgh, Pa., when it was a small place, and remained there until it grew to be a great city. To the Rev. She was brought by her parents from Virginia to their new home, on a farm near St. Clairsville, Belmont County, Ohio, where she continued to live until after the death of her parents. A Rev. Mr. Love now owns and lives upon the farm her father used to possess and cultivate. Two of her brothers, who were both single at the time, went away from their home in Ohio many years ago, and the family ceasing to hear from them, naturally supposed they had died unmarried. Mary Ellen Steen was a devoted Christian, a member of Adena Presbyterian Church. CHAPTER II.

Robert Steen, the second child and son of Robert and Elizabeth Boyd Steen, was born near Chestnut Level, in Lancaster County, Pa., about 1763 (?). He was brought up on his father's farm and spent his whole life near the place. He was a bright, intelligent and industrious man, a school teacher by profession, but was a cripple, suffering from a diseased spine. He was never married, and died while he was comparatively young.

CHAPTER III.

Mary Steen (called "Polly"), the third child and eldest daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Boyd Steen, was born near Chestnut Level, in Lancaster County, Pa., about 1767 (?), and spent her whole life upon the farm, taking care of her parents while they lived, and afterward making the place her home. She was never married.

CHAPTER IV.

Elizabeth Steen (called "Betsy"), the fourth child and second daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Boyd Steen, was born near Chestnut Level, in Lancaster County, Pa., about 1770 (?), and was brought up on her father's farm. She was never married, but resided with her parents, and with her sister took care of them so long as they lived. After her parents' death she and her sister lived together on the place, in possession of the property. She outlived her sister and brothers, and died about 1838 or 1839. After her death a letter was written to her brother, Alexander Steen, in Ohio, to come and see after the estate, but he had died a year or two previous to that time, and none of his children went back to Pennsylvania to see after their interest in the property.

CHAPTER V.

Alexander Steen, the fifth and youngest child and third son of Robert and Elizabeth Boyd Steen, was born near Chestnut Level, in Lancaster County, Pa., February 14, 1773 (more than three years before the declaration of American independence), and brought up on his father's farm, which was not far from the Susquehanna River. In early manhood he removed to Berkeley County, Virginia, where he remained several years. He was married at Martinsburgh, Berkeley County, Va., February 2, 1803, to Miss Agnes Nancy Faris, daughter of a prominent citizen of that place, she having been born there, March 2, 1777, and died at the residence of her eldest son, Aaron Faris Steen, near Youngs-ville, Adams County, Ohio, November 17, 1852, aged 75 years, 8 months and 15 days.*

In 1805 Alexander Steen removed with his family from Virginia and located two miles north of Flemingsburg, Fleming

* "THE FARIS FAMILY."—Mr. Faris, whose wife's name was Nancy, was the father of several children, all born at or near Martinsburgh, Berkeley County, Va., among whom were the following:

I.—Aaron Faris was born about 1769; was married and brought up a family at Martinsburgh, Va.

County, Ky., where he "opened out" a farm. Here he built a substantial hewed log house, two stories high, and comprising several good rooms. In this house, which was considered quite an excellent residence in those early days, he continued to reside while cultivating the farm for nearly fifteen years. In the summer of 1876 the writer, accompanied by his father, visited this "old Kentucky home"; was shown over the farm and through the house; the room where his father was born, in 1807, and the grounds where he had played when a child. Alexander Steen while living in Kentucky was thrown from his horse and one of his legs was broken, and it became slightly shorter than the other, making him a little lame ever afterward. He was not only a successful farmer, but a popular music teacher, and taught old-fashioned singing schools in many localities and for many years. And as music books could not easily be obtained, he had to write them for his pupils, and became quite remarkable for the rapidity, neatness of execution and the skill he acquired in this regard. In 1820 he removed from Kentucky with his family and located upon a farm two miles east of Winchester, in Adams County, Ohio, where he continued to reside for several years. This farm was situated on the west side of Brush Creek, and is now on the turnpike road leading from Winchester to Buck Run. A school-house was built upon it a few years ago, near the iron bridge across the creek. He afterward purchased a large farm one mile northwest of the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church (three miles from Youngsville, four miles from Winchester, and about two miles from the present railway station at Seaman, Adams County, Ohio), where he built a large two-story hewed-log residence, and spent the remainder of his life, an enterprising farmer and successful music teacher. The Mount Leigh Church, although a country church, was a place of religious importance in those early days, where people gathered for worship from many miles around; and it still continues to be a center of usefulness, with services every Sabbath and an active membership of nearly two hundred, sending forth excellent men and women into the various walks of life. This church has lately been removed to the village of Seaman, on the Norfolk and Western Railway, about one mile from its former location, and is still doing excellent service for Christ. Alexander Steen was a man of strong character, an earnest Presbyterian, in which faith he had been brought up by his parents in Pennsylvania, and exerted an extensive influence in the community. His wife's parents were also Presbyterian, and all her brothers and sisters continued to be so, except one brother, who married a lady of another denomination and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. and Mrs. Steen both descended from a long line of Scotch-Irish Presbyterian ancestors, and were themselves members of the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church for many years. Alexander Steen died at his home, near Mount Leigh, April 30, 1837, aged 64 years, 2 months and 16 days. After his death Mrs. Agnes Nancy Steen lived with her children until November 17, 1852, when she died at the residence of her eldest son, Aaron F. Steen, near Youngsville, Ohio, and was buried by the side of her husband, in the Mount Leigh Cemetery. To Alexander and Agnes Nancy Steen were born the following eight children: Jane, Rebecca A., Aaron F., R. Wilson, Catherine E., John W., Alexander B. and Josiah Y. Steen.

They had a family of eight children, whose record is given in "The Steen Family," Book Five, Chapter V.

- I.—Jane Steen, the eldest child and daughter of Alexander and Agnes Nancy Steen, was born near Martinsburgh, Berkeley County, Va., September 19, 1803. She was brought by her parents to their home, near Flemingsburg, Ky., when only two years old, where she spent fifteen years of happy girlhood school days. She removed again with her parents to Ohio, and died the next year, unmarried, at her father's residence, two miles east of Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, September 10, 1821, in the eighteenth year of her age. She is said to have been a beautiful and accomplished young lady, very much beloved.

II.—Rebecca Ann Steen, the second child and daughter of Alexander and Agnes Nancy Steen, was born near Martinsburgh, Berkeley County, Va., November 27, 1804, and was brought in the arms of her mother, when an infant, to their home in Kentucky. She spent fifteen years of happy life upon her father's farm, near Flemingsburg, Ky., and in attending school, helping her mother, etc. In the summer of 1820 she removed with her parents to their home near Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, where she continued to reside. She died near Winchester, Ohio, October 15, 1837, aged 32 years, 10 months and 18 days.

Rebecca A. Steen was married at the residence of her father, near Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, by Aaron Moore, J. P., October 22, 1823, to Samuel Rhoades, a son of Anthony and Jennie Gillespie Rhoades, a farmer by occupation, he having been born in Pennsylvania in 1803, and died in Adams County, Ohio, in 1859, aged 56 years.

To Samuel and Rebecca A. Steen Rhoades were born the following seven children:

1. Sarah Jane Rhoades, the eldest child and daughter of Samuel and Rebecca A. Steen Rhoades, was born near Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, in 1824, and died unmarried in 1842, aged 18 years.
2. Samuel David Belt Rhoades, the second child and eldest son of Samuel and Rebecca A. Steen Rhoades, was born near Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, in 1826. From 1856 until his death he was quite feeble, and suffered from lung disease. He traveled in the South considerably for his health, his brother, Anthony A. Rhoades, accompanying and caring for him. In returning from Galveston, Texas, whither they had gone, and while crossing the Gulf of Mexico on their way to New Orleans, the steamer on which they journeyed was caught in a terrible storm, and it was thought the vessel would be wrecked and all on board would perish. In the midst of the raging storm and the great signals of distress he died, January, 1859, in the thirty-third year of his age. At the time of his death his brother was also very sick and unable to lift his head from his pillow. The vessel at length reached New Orleans in safety, and S. D. Belt Rhoades was buried in the potter's field two days later, at the request of his brother, by the hand of strangers.

3. Cynthia Ann Rhoades, the second daughter and third child of Samuel and Rebecca A. Steen Rhoades, was born near Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, September 22, 1828, and spent her whole life in the county. She made her home a good deal of the time in the family of her uncle, Aaron F. Steen. Cynthia A. Rhoades was married near Winchester, Ohio, in June, 1855, to Joseph K. Vance, and died April 28, 1857, in the twenty-ninth year of her age. Her husband afterward died in Ripley, Ohio. They had no children.

Steen Rhoades, was born near Winchester, Ohio, January 19, 1832, and died near the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church, March 7, 1870, in the thirty-ninth year of her age. She studied in Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, but spent nearly her whole life in Adams County, Ohio. Nancy A. Rhoades was married about two miles from the Mount Leigh Church, at the residence of her uncle, Colonel Josiah Y. Steen, by the Rev. Samuel Van Dyke, June 11, 1857, to Absalom Day, a son of Absalom and Elizabeth Earhart Day, who as early as the year 1800 had settled upon a farm three miles east of Williamsburg, Clermont County, Ohio, and afterward located in Brown County, Ohio, where this Absalom Day was born, December 26, 1817, and died at the residence of his son, Erastus Henry Day, in Fredericktown, Madison County, Mo., May 10, 1897, aged 79 years, 4 months and 13 days. His body was tenderly laid away to rest in the Masonic Cemetery, May 12, 1897. He was a man of sterling worth, highly respected, a devout Christian, and an industrious and useful citizen. To Absalom and Nancy A. Rhoades Day were born the following four children:

J.—Icedora Day, the eldest child and daughter of Absalom and Nancy A. Day, was born in Mount Orab, Brown County, Ohio, July 15, 1858. After the death of her

She afterward made her home, until 1893, in the family of her uncle, Colonel Josiah Y. Steen; and from 1893 until 1896 she lived at Mount Washington, near Cincinnati, Ohio. She early united with the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church, and became an active, devout and useful member of the church and of society in general. She was married by the Rev. U. G. Butler near Seman, Adams County, Ohio, March 31, 1896, to William Wiggins Whittaker, a son of John and Sarah Ann Whittaker, he having been born at South Point, Franklin County, Mo., near the Missouri River, June 28, 1855, and died in Murphysboro, Ill., March 14, 1906, aged 50 years, 8 months and 14 days. His widow, Mrs. Icedora Day Whittaker, now (1916) resides near West Union, Adams County, Ohio. Mr. Whittaker was a house carpenter by occupation, a devout Christian, and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

II.—Effie Day, the second daughter of Absalom and Nancy A. Day, was born near Youngsville, Adams County, Ohio, July 15, 1861. She was married at the same place by the Rev. George Fulton, October 3, 1883, to Franklin LaFayette Higgins, a son of James P. and Mary Higgins, he having been born near West Union, Adams County, Ohio, July 13, 1859. James P. Higgins, the father of Franklin L. Higgins, was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, and came to Adams County, Ohio, in 1837, where he was married, and has since resided upon a farm near West Union, Ohio, adjoining that upon which his son now lives. She continued to live at or near the place of her birth until the autumn of 1884, when she removed to Oregon City, Ore., and made her home in the family of her uncle, Thomas W. Rhoades, proprietor of the "Cliff House," in that city. Miss A. Josephine Day was married by the Rev. S. P. Davis, pastor of the Baptist Church in Oregon City, Ore., August 11, 1886, to Hezekiah H. Johnson, a son of Rev. Hezekiah Johnson, a pioneer missionary in Oregon, he having been born in Oregon City, July 23, 1849, and where he has ever resided. He was apprenticed to William Sharp, under whom he learned the brickmason's trade. He early became quite proficient in his work, and molded all the bricks and assisted in building near Mount Leigh, Ohio, the large brick residence of his uncle, Aaron F. Steen, in 1849, when he was only a youth of seventeen years. In 1850 he removed to Berlin, Sangamon County, Ill., and two years later caught the California fever, and with many other emigrants crossed the plains, expecting to make a fortune. For some time afterward he was superintendent of mason work in the erection of some government buildings in Los Angeles, for which he received six dollars a day. After several years in California he became a traveling agent. In 1857 he located in Portland, Ore., and for about fifteen years worked there at his trade, and in Boise City, Idaho. Steen, near Mount Leigh, Ohio, where he worked on the farm in summer and attended school in winter until he was eighteen years of age. In May, 1855, he removed from Adams County, Ohio, to Sangamon County, Illinois, where he made his home for many years. In 1858 he left his regular work to travel with and take care of his brother, S. D. Belt Rhoades, who at that time was in very poor health, and gradually kept on growing weaker until at length he died while they were crossing the Gulf of Mexico, and in the midst of a terrible storm, which took place in January, 1859. In 1862 he went to the Pacific Coast, where he spent more than three years, principally in Oregon, and returned to Illinois in the autumn of 1865, being on the stormy Atlantic on his thirty-first birthday. From San Francisco, Cal., he made the trip in thirty-six days; spent two weeks in Greytown, Nicaragua; afterward continued his journey to New York, going on board the vessel "Ericsson," which was propelled by hot air, and safely reached his destination. From 1865 until 1883 he resided continually in Sangamon County, Illinois, and worked at his trade, a plasterer and calciminer; then permanently removed to Albany, Ore., where he spent the remainder of his days. He was a most agreeable companion, witty, full of jokes, and always very fond of music, even in his boyhood days. He possessed a rich, sweet voice, acquired great skill, and was a popular music teacher and leader of the choir in the church for many years. In the winter of 1889-90 he suffered from a severe attack of la grippe, or influenza, which finally terminated in pneumonia, from which he died at his home in Albany, Ore., quietly passing away from earth in the full hope of a glorious immortality. Anthony A. Rhoades was married by the Rev. Perry Bennett, a Baptist minister, in Berlin, Sangamon County, Ill., in December, 1860, to Miss Nancy A. Harmon, a daughter of Henry and Mary Harmon, of Berlin, she having been born in 1841, and died December 12, 1866, aged 25 years. Her body was laid to rest in the Island Grove Cemetery. Anthony A. Rhoades was married a second time by the Rev. Charles Rowe, at Berlin, Ill., March 21, 1869, to Miss Mary Frances Yates, a daughter of Thomas and Nancy Higgins Yates, she having been born in Berlin, Ill., March 28, 1838. Her father's brother, Richard Yates, was the War Governor of Illinois and United States Senator. In March, 1889, the twentieth anniversary of the married life of Anthony A. and Mary F. Rhoades was delightfully celebrated at their residence in Albany, Ore. Many relatives and friends of the family were gathered together, and proceeded with a most enjoyable program. The bride and groom of twenty years expressed their satisfaction with each other and renewed their vows of faithfulness until death. The following poem, written for the occasion by J. B. Hughes, a special friend of the family, was sung by himself and others:

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

We've come to help you celebrate
Your china wedding day;
To bring remembrance of the time
When every heart was gay.
We will partake of pie and cake,
And spend an hour or so
To wish you joy, as others did
Just twenty years ago.

You've wandered far from that dear place
Where childhood's days were spent,
Where youthful sports in early life
To bless a while were sent;
Where hearts took fire with love's desire,
Consumed and melted so.
The preacher called and made you one
Just twenty years ago.

We can not be the same dear friends
Who met to bless you then,
Reflecting back your happiness
Again and yet again.
You've come away, and wandered they,
And some are sleeping low,
And all so changed you ne'er can meet
Like twenty years ago.

The wheel of time is rolling on;
How swift the years do pass,
To change us all from youth to age,
And reap us down at last.
But happy we will try to be
While dwelling here below,
And be as true as those you knew
Some twenty years ago.

You occupy the middle ground
'Twixt youth and crumbling age;
The silver hairs begin to mark
You for another stage.
May purest love draw thee above,
Nor ever cease to flow
For us now here, and those so dear
Of twenty years ago.

'Tis well to pause 'mid cares of life
And cast a backward look,
And in your thoughts live o'er again
The time thy courtship took;
To well decide for groom and bride,
'Mongst all that each did know,
Which one to choose and not refuse,
Some twenty years ago.

Oh, happy choice, where love directs,
And makes the heart to move!
And you have both had time enough
Your constancy to prove.
Again we wish each china dish
With good things may o'erflow,
And joys to bless be never less
Than twenty years ago.

He died a devout Christian, at the home of his mother, in Albany, Linn County, Ore., May 29, 1897, in the twentieth year of his age.

7. Aaron Martin Rhoades, the seventh child and fourth son of Samuel and Rebecca Ann Steen Rhoades, was born near Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, in October, 1837, and died in November, 1837, when only a few weeks old.

III.—Aaron Faris Steen, the third child and eldest son of Alexander and Agnes Nancy Faris Steen, was born two miles north of Flemingsburg, Fleming County, Ky., August 23, 1807, and died at his home in Xenia, Ohio, February 15, 1881, aged 73 years, 5 months and 23 days. He spent his happy boyhood days on the farm in that "old Kentucky home," and was brought by his parents to their new location near Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, in 1820, when thirteen years of age. Here he grew to manhood, assisting his father upon the farm in summer and attending school in winter, and when a young man taught school for a while. He also devoted much attention to music, in which he became quite proficient, and very popular as an instructor. During the winter months he taught many singing schools in various parts of the county, and for many years was leader of the music in the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church. His social qualities and natural genial disposition made him quite a general favorite in the society of both old and young. Aaron F. Steen was married at the residence of Michael Freeman, on Scioto Brush Creek, ten miles east of West Union, Adams County, Ohio, March 25, 1830, to Miss Mary Freeman, a daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Duncan Freeman, she having been born in the same house in which she was married, October 7, 1810. The Rev. John Meek, who had been engaged to solemnize the marriage, was unable to reach the place because of the high waters then prevailing and the lack of bridges across the streams; and Thomas Williams, a Justice of the Peace, who was present as an invited guest, performed the marriage ceremony.

Moses and Nancy Knight Freeman, the grandparents of Mary Freeman, were born in England, married in London, and emigrated to America about 1762, and located upon a farm in Queen Anne County, in the British colony of Maryland, near the eastern shore of the Chesapeake Bay, where they brought up a family of several children.

Michael and Elizabeth Duncan Freeman, the parents of the bride, were among the early settlers in the Northwest Territory, having removed from the eastern shore of Maryland and located on Blue Creek, in what is now Adams County, Ohio, in the year 1797 — less than ten years after the first permanent white settlement was made in what is now the great State of Ohio. A few years later they secured a large farm, situated on both sides of Scioto Brush Creek, at the mouth of Burley's Run, where they made their permanent home. Here they built a large hewed log house, a story and a half high, with an enormous stone chimney and ample fireplace, which at that time was considered a fine residence, in which Mary Freeman was born and married. The bride's mother was a daughter of Charles and Keziah Duncan, of Queen Anne County, Maryland, who were the parents of several children, one of whom at least (Mary Duncan) was married in Maryland to John Williams, and removed in that early day to the Far West, probably in the same company of immigrants with Michael and Elizabeth Duncan Freeman, but locating first in Kentucky, and afterward coming into what is now Adams County, Ohio. After his marriage Aaron F. Steen located upon a farm which he had leased for five years, situated on Brush Creek, at the mouth of Elk Run, two miles east of Winchester, Ohio. Here, upon an elevation overlooking the stream, and near a fine spring, he built a comfortable log cabin and went to housekeeping. Soon afterward he united with the Presbyterian Church at Mount Leigh, as also did his wife, she having previously been connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Blue Creek ever since she was thirteen years old. Both were devoted and earnest Christians, active and useful members of the church. For nearly five years Aaron F. Steen successfully and profitably cultivated the farm on Brush Creek, but in the autumn of 1834, his lease having nearly expired, his father-in-law, now growing old, and wishing to retire from the business, offered him favorable terms to come and take charge of his large farm. He accepted the terms, and soon afterward removed with his family to the old Freeman homestead, near the headwaters of the east fork of Scioto Brush Creek, two miles above the mouth of Blue Creek, and about ten miles from Rome, a village on the Ohio River. This farm is located on the main road leading from West Union to Portsmouth, about ten miles east of West Union and about twenty-six from Portsmouth. In front of the house was a beautiful grassy lawn, and further on the creek, bordered with rocky cliffs crowned with evergreen spruce and cedar trees, quite romantic. From one cliff to another across the creek extended a high foot bridge, with a railing on either side. Along the rear of the house was a wide veranda or porch, from the north end of which was an entrance to the kitchen and dining room, and at the south end a bed room. Back of the house there was a fine orchard; south of this one hundred yards was Burley's Run, while just beyond was "The Ridge" or "Sugar Camp" of many delightful associations. Away to the east and across the creek were the principal agricultural lands. The surrounding country was hilly, almost mountainous, for the hills were large, covered with finest timber and inhabited by wild beasts.

Mr. Steen was scarcely yet settled upon the old Freeman farm when Michael Freeman sickened and died, April 14, 1835. This sad event disarranged his plans, but again terms were offered which he accepted, and continued in charge of the farm for thirteen years, making farming his principal business, though he also taught many singing schools. During the years of residence on Scioto Brush Creek Mr. and Mrs. Steen were members and regular attendants of the Presbyterian Church at West Union, ten miles away, but for their accommodation services were often held in their own house. The pastor was the Rev. John P. Van Dyke, a man of sterling worth and faithful in doctrinal instruction. The Seceders held regular services at Wait's Mill, on Blue Creek, once a month, which they usually attended, as it was near their home, the second story of the mill having been fitted up for church purposes. Aaron F. and Mary Steen were, on September 1, 1838, regularly dismissed from the Mount Leigh Church to unite with the church in West Union, where they were duly received, and continued until March 24, 1849, when they were again received into the church at Mount Leigh. They were devotedly attached to their children and earnest in their religious instruction; daily morning and evening family worship was regularly observed in the household. The Bible and the Shorter Catechism were the text books of study on the Sabbath, which by them was a day devoted to religious reading and worship, and at length it was their privilege and joy to see all their children who lived to maturity connected with the church.

Aaron F. Steen was a tall man, just six feet high, with pale blue eyes, fair skin, light hair, and beard a little sandy. He grew up slender, but when he was older became fleshy, and weighed over two hundred pounds. His wife was a short, slender little woman of dark complexion, black eyes and hair, energetic and spiritedly, like her mother, but in later years she also became more fleshy. About 1843 Mr. Steen purchased a farm near his father's old home, on Mount Leigh, in which neighborhood all his brothers resided. This farm he leased for a term of years to a man who built a house and stable, cleared a few fields, cultivated the land and put the place in good repair. This farm was situated on the main road from Winchester to the Mount Leigh Church, three miles east of Winchester, one mile and a half from Mount Leigh, two miles from Youngsville, and just a little more than one mile to Seaman, Ohio. The Norfolk and Western Railway passes directly through it, just back of the orchard and barn. After having settled the Freeman estate, on August 31, 1848, Mr. Steen removed to his new home, in the neighborhood of Mount Leigh, several wagons being loaded with goods, and a number of persons driving the stock over the rough and hilly way, a distance of about twenty miles. To this new home, in addition to his own family, he brought his wife's mother,* his wife's oldest sister, Nancy K. Freeman, who never married, and his wife's brother's daughter, Sarah M. K. F. Freeman, then only a little child, where they all continued to reside. Here Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan Freeman, the mother of Mrs. Steen, died, April 23, 1851, aged 83 years, 7 months and 2 days. Her body was taken to the old cemetery on Blue Creek and tenderly laid away to rest by the side of her husband.

At Mount Leigh the whole family were regular attendants at the church and Sabbath school, of which the Rev. James Dunlap was pastor, and by whom all the living children were baptized in the church on Sunday morning, October 2, 1848.

Aaron F. Steen having previously been elected, was duly ordained and installed a ruling elder of the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church December 1, 1849, which office he held for many years, and frequently represented the session as a member of Chillicothe Presbytery. The summer of 1849 was one of unceasing toil on the farm, and it was fortunate that the boys were large enough to render considerable assistance. Mr. Steen had a peculiar tact in making even small boys useful, without overtaxing their strength, and this summer every boy had his mission to fill. The bricks were made and burned principally by the boys, under the direction of William Sharp and his apprentice, Thomas W. Rhoades; and late in the fall a fine, large, two-story brick residence was built and a roof put upon it. The next season (1850) it was finished inside and furnished, and a large, new bank barn erected; and thus improvements were going on. On this farm Mr. Steen continued to reside for seventeen years, an enterprising, successful man and an influential citizen. In the summer of 1865 he sold the farm near Mount Leigh and bought a small tract of land on West Second Street, adjoining the city of Xenia, Ohio, to which he removed with his family, and where he spent the remaining sixteen years of his life. Here himself and wife united with the First Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. William T. Findley, D.D., was pastor at that time. He cultivated the little farm and with his eldest son kept a provision store in Xenia. In 1874 a delightful family reunion was held in his home, near Xenia, at which all his living descendants were present. Excellent music enlivened the occasion, old associations were revived, and many amusing incidents connected with early life recalled. An artist was present, who took a picture of the entire group, including the family residence. Before they separated, religious services were held, in which all heartily joined, every member of the family over ten years of age being a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. The Golden Wedding, or fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron F. Steen, was duly celebrated at their residence on Thursday, March 25, 1880, at which many friends and relatives were gathered from different counties and States; and all concurred in the opinion that it was one of the most delightful occasions of the kind they had ever witnessed. Something like the following order was observed: Ceremony; congratulations; historical addresses — "The Steen Family in Europe," by Rev. M. D. A. Steen, of Ludlow, Ky.; "The Steen Family in America," by Professor W. Freeman Steen, of Cincinnati, Ohio; "The Steen Family — Present Generation," by Dr. John A. Steen, of Ripley, Ohio; "Reminiscences of My Early Life," by Mr. Aaron F. Steen; "Recollections of the Wedding Fifty Years Ago," by the only guest then living, Mrs. Catherine E. Blair, of North Liberty, Ohio; "The Characteristics of the Steen Family," by William Ferguson, Esq., of Xenia, Ohio. Letters of regret were read from Professor E. W. Steen, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Mr. Alexander B. Steen, of Winchester, Ohio; Professor Silas M. Steen, of Washington C. H., Ohio, and Mr. William A. Blair, of Eaton, Ind. Among the presents received was an elegant gold-headed cane from Dr. John A. Steen, of Ripley, Ohio.

Not long after this joyful occasion Mr. Steen's health began to fail, and he grew weaker until his death, which occurred at his residence on Tuesday morning, February 15, 1881, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. The funeral took place from the Presbyterian Church on the Thursday following, conducted by the Rev. F. M. Wood, and his body was lovingly laid to rest in Woodlawn Cemetery, near Xenia. He was a man highly respected and much beloved by all who knew him.

Mrs. Mary Freeman Steen, after the death of her husband, rented the place and moved into the city with her daughter, where they lived together until after the latter's marriage, in 1885, and for two years afterward resided with her in Yellow Springs, Ohio. From 1887, and until her death, she lived with her son, in Knoxville, Tenn., and became a member of the Third (Southern) Presbyterian Church in that city. She also made extensive visits to her daughter, who at different times lived in Westboro, Mass., and Cincinnati, Ohio. Well does the writer remember how that when he was a child, and guilty of some misdoing, she used to lead him to some quiet place alone, lovingly, earnestly and often tearfully tell him of his fault, and then kneel down with him and pray to God for pardon and His grace to make him a better boy. God was pleased to bless her faithful instructions and prayers to his conversion, and the life-work of a Christian minister. She was a woman well known wherever she resided, and one who exerted a wide religious influence. She was noted for generous hospitality, and a genial, social and benevolent disposition, which made her always ready to make sacrifices for the good of others. After an illness of about two months, she died at the residence of her son, No. 119 Pearl Place, Knoxville, Tenn., at 6:30 a. m., July 27, 1895, in the eighty-fifth year of her age, rejoicing in hope of a glorious immortality, leaving her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn her loss, but to "rise up and call her blessed." She was the last surviving member of her father's family which came into Ohio in 1797. Her body was taken to Ohio and tenderly laid by the side of her husband, in the beautiful Woodlawn Cemetery, near Xenia. "Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

lowing children: W. Freeman, E. Watson, S. Martin, J. Truman, Moses D. A., Josiah James, S. Catherine, Isaac Birt, and William Wirt Steen.

- I. Wilson Freeman Steen, the eldest son of Aaron F. and Mary Freeman Steen, was born two miles east of Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, May 11, 1831, and died in Xenia, Ohio, March 20, 1883, aged 51 years, 10 months and 9 days. When a little child, in the autumn of 1834 or very early in the spring of 1835, he was taken by his parents to the old home of his grandfather, Michael Freeman, on Scioto Brush Creek, two miles west of Blue Creek, in Jefferson Township, Adams County, Ohio, where he spent his happy boyhood days, attended school and assisted his father upon the farm. In the summer of 1848 he removed with his parents to their new home, three miles east of Winchester, on the road to the Mount Leigh Church, where he continued to work upon the farm in summer and go to school in the winter. He was a regular attendant at church and Sabbath school, a diligent student, an energetic and industrious young man. He early gave his heart to Christ, and united with the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church in 1849, and ever afterward maintained a devout, consistent and useful Christian life. After he became of age he spent one year in Delaware County, Indiana, where he taught school on Jake's Creek, four miles north of Muncie, near the residence of his uncle, Isaac Freeman, with whom he boarded. In 1853 he returned to Adams County, Ohio, and engaged in teaching near the place of his birth. Like his father, grandfather and great-grandfather Steen, he was always very fond of music, and possessed a natural talent for it, which he cultivated to the highest degree. In musical institutes, under competent leaders, and at a musical normal school in Decatur, Ohio, under the direction of Professor Dwight H. Baldwin, he was thoroughly qualified and became a popular and successful teacher of vocal and instrumental music. He taught many classes in Adams, Brown and Clermont Counties, often so many as three at different places, upon each secular day of the week, and for some time resided in Williamsburg, Ohio. In 1860 he removed to Xenia, Ohio, and followed his chosen profession; was associated with his father in a provision store, and for a time carried on the Xenia marble works. His services were in constant demand at musical institutes and as leader of church choirs and singing classes. In 1867 he removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, and opened a store for the sale of musical instruments; also leader of the music in the First Presbyterian Church. In the summer of 1877 he removed to Ludlow, Ky., just across the river, and himself and family united with the First Presbyterian Church there, of which at that time his brother was pastor. He was ordained and installed a ruling elder in that church September 15, 1878, in which position he was an efficient church officer and a very useful man. As leader of the music and teacher in the Sabbath school his work was exceedingly profitable. W. Freeman Steen was a man of sterling worth and unflinching integrity; a devout Christian for many years, having been connected with the Presbyterian churches at Mount Leigh, Xenia, Cincinnati, Ohio, and finally at Ludlow, Ky. He was by nature possessed of a kind heart and gentle spirit; was always interested in every good work and constantly making friends. In the autumn of 1882 failing health obliged him to cease from all business, and he returned to Xenia, Ohio, to spend his remaining days. Here he gradually grew weaker, but continued very meek, patient and uncomplaining to the last. He died March 20, 1883, in the assured hope of a blessed inheritance, and his body was laid away to rest in the beautiful Woodlawn Cemetery, near Xenia, Ohio.

Professor W. Freeman Steen was married by the Rev. William Fee, in Xenia, Ohio, December 25, 1862, to Miss Emma Marie Stipp, a daughter of Dr. Nathan B. and Eliza J. Stipp, she having been born in Bellbrook, Greene County, Ohio, October 8, 1842, and died of paralysis in Cincinnati, Ohio, October 3, 1899, aged 57 years. Her body was laid beside her husband, in Xenia Cemetery, October 6, 1899. To Professor W. Freeman and Emma M. Steen were born the following children:

wife in the beautiful Woodlawn Cemetery, near Xenia, Ohio. When a very little child E. Watson Steen was taken by his parents to the old Freman farm, on Scioto Brush Creek, two miles west of Blue Creek, and ten miles east of West Union, Adams County, Ohio, where his happy boyhood days were spent, attending school and assisting his father on the farm. He removed with his parents, August 31, 1848, when he was fifteen years old, to the farm his father had purchased, lying on the road from Winchester to Mount Leigh, and about a mile from the place where he was born. He and his older brother were his father's principal assistants on the farm, which was new and required much hard labor. They worked faithfully during the summer and attended school in the winter. He was a regular attendant at the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church and Sabbath school for many years; early gave his heart to Christ, and united with the church in 1849, and ever afterward maintained a consistent Christian life. Like his ancestors, his father and his brother, he delighted in music, and had a special talent for it, which was highly cultivated. When he became of age he took a thorough course in musical studies in normal music schools in Russellville, and in Decatur, Ohio, under the direction of Professor Dwight H. Baldwin, and became a teacher of vocal and instrumental music, in which profession he became very proficient and quite popular. He held many classes in different parts of Adams County, Ohio, sometimes having as many as three singing schools upon each secular day of the week, also leading the music in the church on the Sabbath. He had a sweet voice, was a fine singer, and to some extent a composer of music. His services were eagerly sought at musical institutes, conventions, and as an instructor in normal music classes, in which he was very successful. After his marriage, in 1855, he located upon a farm which his father had purchased, and which he afterward possessed, lying on the direct road from Winchester to Youngsville, about one and a half miles from the latter place, and the same distance from the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church. In the summer of 1862 he enlisted as a private soldier in the Union Army for the defense of his country, in Company E, Ninety-first Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry; was promoted to Second Sergeant, and on a few occasions commanded the company. He was stationed principally in West Virginia, and owing to failing health was honorably discharged from the service. During his absence in the army his own house was ransacked by the soldiers of John Morgan in their raid through Ohio. In the summer of 1867 he sold his farm near Youngsville and Mount Leigh, and removed to Xenia, Ohio, where he continued to reside and follow his profession for several years; then became a traveling agent for the large music house of D. H. Baldwin & Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, being one of the most esteemed and successful salesmen. Owing to a complete failure of health he was compelled to retire from business for several years, and resided with his family in Xenia, Ohio. His health having somewhat improved, and desiring to locate in a milder climate, in May, 1880, he removed to Knoxville, Tenn., and in connection with another gentleman opened a music house, for the sale of music and musical instruments, under the firm name of "Steen & Marshall," but in a year or two dissolved partnership and continued in business by himself alone. At Xenia, Ohio, E. Watson Steen and all his family were members of the First Presbyterian Church, and at Knoxville, Tenn., they all united with the Third (Southern) Presbyterian Church, of which he was elected, ordained and installed a ruling elder, which office he held until his death. After the death of his father, in 1881, he was made executor of his estate. In 1887 his mother came to reside in his family, where she made her home until her death in 1895, although she made extensive visits to her daughter, who lived in Westboro, Mass., and in Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Steen acquired considerable property, and resided at his pleasant home, No. 119 Pearl Place, Knoxville, Tenn.

Professor E. Watson Steen was married by the Rev. James Dunlap, in West Union, Adams County, Ohio, October 25, 1855, to Miss Julia Emily Lilly Diboll, a daughter of Dr. Victor M. and Philena L. Diboll, she having been born in Sardinia, Brown County, Ohio, December 7, 1839, and died at her home, No. 119 Pearl Place, Knoxville, Tenn., September 17, 1896, in the fifty-seventh year of her age. Her body was interred in the Woodlawn Cemetery, near

PROFESSOR E. WATSON STEEN.

Xenia, Ohio. To Professor E. Watson and Julia E. L. Steen were born the following three children:

I.—Laura Alice Steen, the eldest daughter of Professor E. Watson and Julia E. L. Steen, was born at the home of her parents, on the farm, near Youngsville and Mount Leigh, in Adams County, Ohio, August 18, 1856, and resided with her parents, in Adams County, and in Xenia, Ohio. She early united with the First Presbyterian Church in Xenia, Ohio, of which she remained a consistent member. She received a good education in the Xenia schools. Like her father, she possessed fine musical talents, which were cultivated to a high degree, so that she became not only an accomplished singer, but an excellent teacher of instrumental music as well. Miss L. Allie Steen was a young lady of good social qualities and attractive manner, but her genial and useful career was soon cut off by that dread disease, quick consumption. She died at the home of her parents, in Xenia, Ohio, June 5, 1878, in the twenty-second year of her age, and in the certain hope of a blessed immortality. The funeral took place from the Presbyterian Church, and her body was laid away in Woodlawn Cemetery, near Xenia, Ohio.

II.—Mary Estella Steen, the second daughter of Professor E. Watson and Julia E. L. Steen, was born at the home of her parents, near Mount Leigh and Youngsville, Adams County, Ohio, January 13, 1860, and continued to live with her parents, near Mount Leigh, and in Xenia, Ohio, until her marriage. She early united with the First Presbyterian Church in Xenia, and remained a consistent member. She secured a good education in the Xenia schools and was an interesting and accomplished young lady, possessing considerable literary talent. She published several interesting original stories of merit, one being entitled "Book Learning Versus Housekeeping." Mary E. Steen was married by her uncle, Rev. Moses D. A. Steen, at the Grand Hotel, Cincinnati, Ohio, March 16, 1880, to Earnest L. Lawrence, of Xenia, Ohio. They resided in Xenia, Ohio, for about five years after marriage, where Mr. Lawrence was agent for the Xenia Powder Company. In 1885 they removed to Chicago, Ill., where they continued to reside until her death, which took place March 19, 1890, aged 30 years, 2 months and 6 days. Her body was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, near Xenia, Ohio. To Earnest L. and Mary E. Lawrence were born the following children:

1. Mildred Lawrence was born in Knoxville, Tenn., at the residence of her grandfather, E. W. Steen, June 1, 1884, and died at the home of her father in Dayton, Ohio, when a young woman.
2. Meredith Fay Lawrence was born in Chicago, Ill., November 10, 1889.

III.—Julia Emerine Pearl Steen, the third daughter of Professor E. Watson and Julia E. L. Steen, was born in Xenia, Ohio, August 8, 1871, and she resided with her parents in Xenia, Ohio, and Knoxville, Tenn. She early united with the Third Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, and has ever maintained a consistent Christian life. She secured a good education and has fine musical talents, which have been thoroughly cultivated, making her a very popular singer, as well as an excellent performer in public. She has composed and published many pieces of music which are quite meritorious. She took the first prize offered by The Atlanta Journal for the best musical composition, open to musicians of several States.

Julia Emerine Pearl Steen was married at Knoxville, Tenn., on Monday, December 4, 1899, to Dr. Charles A. Garratt, a teacher of vocal and instrumental music, and a fine organist. They devote their entire time to music teaching and singing in the choirs of the city. They have no children. Residence, Chattanooga, Tenn.

3. Samuel Martin Steen, the third son of Aaron F. and Mary Freeman Steen, was born on the old Freeman homestead, on Scioto Brush Creek, two miles above the mouth of Blue Creek, in Adams County, Ohio, July 5, 1836. Here he lived with his parents until he was twelve years of age, going to school, and assisting his father as he was able. In 1848 he removed with the family to their new home, twenty miles distant, near the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church, where he continued to work on the farm in summer and attend school in the winter, while at the same time he continued to be a regular attendant at the Mount Leigh Church and Sabbath school. Having secured a good common-school education at Mount Leigh, he afterward attended the State Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, under the direction of Professor E. H. Holbrook, and became a teacher. S. Martin Steen was a young man of brilliant talents, a natural mathematician, delighting in difficult problems. He was also able in argument and extremely fond of it. Often he would present a proposition to his brother, or other friend, to see which side he would take, then take the opposite side and use such strong arguments as to compel his opponent to confess himself in the wrong. Then, after taking a good laugh, he would take up the other side of the question, and convince him back again that he had been right after all, and enjoy another hearty laugh. He had the peculiar faculty of doing this without giving offense, and purely from the love of debate. He was a young man of great energy and perseverance, and had his life been spared he would probably have made his mark in the world. He taught quite successfully several terms of school, the last one being at Sandy Springs, Adams County, Ohio, near the Ohio River, which closed in June, 1859. While living at Sandy Springs he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church upon profession of faith in Christ. Here also, while engaged in teaching, he caught a very severe cold, which settled upon his lungs and soon developed into quick consumption. He died at the residence of his father, near the Mount Leigh Church, with an assured hope of a glorious immortality, October 13, 1859, aged 23 years, 3 months and 8 days. His body was lovingly laid away to rest in the Mount Leigh Cemetery.

4. John Truman Steen, the fourth son of Aaron F. and Mary Freeman Steen, was born on the old Freeman homestead, on Scioto Brush Creek, in Jefferson Township, Adams County, Ohio, May 18, 1838. His earliest associations were connected with the home of his mother's parents, who came from Maryland to that locality in 1797, and where his mother was born and brought up. This old homestead was located ten miles east of West Union, and about the same distance northwest of Rome, a village on the Ohio River. When a little child he went to school on Blue Creek, two and one-fourth miles away. Near the mouth of this beautiful stream there was a junction of the roads leading to Portsmouth, Rome and West Union; also a country store, a postoffice, a blacksmith shop, etc., where the principal trading and business of the locality was done. In 1848, when ten years of age, he was taken by his parents to their new home, on the farm his father had purchased, three miles from Winchester, Ohio, on the road to the Mount Leigh Church, where he grew up to manhood. Here in the Mount Leigh School he secured a good common-school education. He afterward attended the State Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, under the superintendency of Professor E. H. Holbrook, and qualified himself for a teacher, in which profession he was especially successful. He taught quite a number of schools, the last being at Harsha's Mills, about four miles from his father's home. He was exceedingly fond of music, and is said to have had the finest and most natural talent for it of any member of the family. Mrs. Ann Williams, widow of the late Rev. Nathaniel Williams, who was the minister at Mount Leigh, and knew him well, writes, more than thirty-eight years after his death, concerning J. Truman Steen as follows: "I was well acquainted with Watson and Truman. I think now I can hear Truman singing 'The Home of the Soul.' OH! HE COULD SING." His social qualities were also of a very high order, and hence his company was sought and enjoyed by all his acquaintances. J. Truman Steen united with the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church June 9, 1858, on profession of faith in Christ, and continued to be an earnest, devout and useful Christian. While engaged in teaching at Harsha's Mills, Adams County, Ohio, he caught a severe cold, which developed into consumption. He died at the residence of his father, June 25, 1862, aged 24 years, 1 month and 7 days. He was universally beloved and his death greatly lamented. His body was tenderly laid away to rest in the cemetery at Mount Leigh.

5. Moses Duncan Alexander Steen, the fifth son of Aaron F. and Mary Freeman Steen, was born at the old Freeman homestead, on Scioto Brush Creek, ten miles east of West Union, and two miles west of Blue Creek, in Adams County, Ohio, April 24, 1841. His earliest recollections were of the old home, where his mother was born and brought up — the orchard, the creek, the rocky cliffs and cedar trees, the high bridge, the sugar camp, the old church, the graveyard and the surrounding hills. The death of his little brother, in the autumn of 1844, was never effaced from his memory. His first day at school on Blue Creek remains as a vivid picture, one brother holding each hand as they walked along until they came to Smalley's store, where they bought a "primer" full of bright pictures and proceeded to the schoolhouse, where the teacher took him on her lap; the school exhibition the next winter, at which he recited "Twinkle, twinkle little star," and the long Sabbath services of the Seceders at Wait's Mill, have never been forgotten. In 1848, when he was seven years old, the family removed to their new home, near the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church, in which he was baptized by the Rev. James Dunlap, October 2, 1848, and grew up to manhood on his father's farm. He was a regular attendant at the Mount Leigh Church, Sabbath school and district school, while every Sabbath afternoon was devoted by his parents to the religious instruction of their children. Moses D. A. Steen united with the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church on profession of faith in Christ June 8, 1858, and began a course of study in North Liberty Academy. He afterward spent three years in Salem Academy, then under the direction of Rev. James A. I. Lowes, D.D.; one year in Hanover College, at Hanover, Ind., and completed the classical course in Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, from which he was graduated, receiving the degree of A.B. June 27, 1866. He entered the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary, at Xenia, Ohio, September 1, 1886, and remained one term. He afterward attended the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest, at Chicago, Ill., from which he was graduated April 1, 1869, having spent the autumn session of 1868 in Princeton Theological Seminary, at Princeton, N. J. He was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Old School Presbytery of Chillicothe, in Hillsboro, Ohio, April 8, 1868, and spent the summer vacation in preaching at Mount Sterling and Sharpsburg, Ky. Immediately after graduating from the Theological Seminary, in April, 1869, he took charge of the church at Worthington, near Columbus, Ohio, and the next year accepted an invitation to the church in Vevay, Ind., and was ordained to the full work of the ministry in that church by the Presbytery of New Albany, September 8, 1870. In January, 1872, he accepted a call to the pastorate of the church at

Solon, near Cleveland, Ohio, which, in April, 1873, he resigned to accept a call to the church at Conneautville, Pa. On Monday, June 1, 1874, a terrible conflagration swept away a large part of the village, leaving many without homes and seriously affecting the work of the church. In December of that year Mr. Steen resigned the pastorate and took charge of the church in Waterford, Erie County, Pa. In May, 1875, he accepted a call to the First Presbyterian Church of Ludlow, Ky., opposite Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained six years and three months. Through his patient, faithful and persistent labors a heavy and pressing mortgage debt was removed, and the church placed upon a substantial basis of prosperity. In the summer of 1877, while in charge of this church, he made an extensive tour through Europe, traveling leisurely throughout Ireland, Scotland, England, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland and France, and returned to his work with renewed vigor. August 19, 1881, he resigned his charge at Ludlow, Ky., and accepted an invitation to the church at Pleasant Ridge, Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained for a year. His wife being in feeble health at the time, they determined to seek a change of climate, and he accepted an invitation to Davisville, Cal., where he entered upon the work with encouraging prospects in September, 1882, but a few months later returned to the East. In the summer of 1883 he supplied the churches of Troy and Edwardsville, Ill., and in the fall accepted an invitation to Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, Gunnison, Col., entering upon his work there the first Sabbath in October, 1883, and had a prosperous year. October 1, 1884, he accepted an invitation to the church at Black Hawk, Col., but owing to the high altitude, which affected her heart, Mrs. Steen could not live there, and by physicians' advice the next summer they came to the Pacific Coast, reaching Portland, Ore., July 1, 1885; he spent one Sabbath at Albany, Ore.; preached two months in the First Church of Tacoma, Wash., and supplied the church at Snohomish, Wash., for one year, the church doubling its membership during that time. July 1, 1886, Mr. Steen accepted an invitation to the Presbyterian Church of Woodbridge, Cal., to begin his labors September 1, at which time he accordingly removed to Woodbridge, Cal.; was afterward called to the pastorate, and continued in charge of the church more than sixteen years.

Moses D. A. Steen and his wife, since going to the West, in 1883, have devoted their leisure hours in special courses of study together, and have received diplomas, or certificates of graduation, from the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle at Monterey, Cal., in 1889; and afterward the Guild of the Seven Seals, which is the highest rank obtainable. They also completed the seven years' course of Bible study in the Philadelphia Bible Correspondence School, receiving their diplomas in 1890. In 1892 Dr. Steen was made a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, Philadelphia. In connection with his work in Woodbridge, Cal., after some months of preliminary services, Rev. James S. McDonald, D.D., assisted by Rev. M. D. A. Steen, on September 29, 1889, organized a church at Clements, fourteen miles east, where no church organization of any kind had before existed, and supplied it with preaching at regular intervals for several years. With a membership of only nine persons, he was instrumental in building and dedicating, without debt, on this mission field a beautiful and substantial church edifice, worth $5,000.

In the "History of Adams County, Ohio," page 869, the author writes as follows:

Dr. Steen is a man of fine culture, deep scholarship and unusual ability. His Christianity is profound. In many particulars he has been like John Elliott or Jonathan Edwards, in that he has lavished upon his congregations in remote places learning that would shame many a metropolitan pulpit. He has a warmth of religious affection that would satisfy a Baxter. He cheers the sorrowing, and the poor are helped by his tender consolations. He has lived a useful life and holds the affections of all his people, men, women and children. He is true to all obligations; believes and cultivates in himself and others those virtues which make true Christian manhood and womanhood. His life is a true exemplification of his teachings.

The Presbytery of Stockton, in session in Napa, Cal., October 15, 1901, unanimously adopted the following and ordered it to be sent to Dr. Steen:

The Presbytery, noting the absence of our beloved brother and Stated Clerk, the Rev. M. D. A. Steen, D.D., Ph.D., and having learned of the ill health of himself and wife, sends to him greetings, recognizing his long and efficient services to the Presbytery of Stockton, invoking the Divine blessing upon him, and praying God that he may be restored to health and usefulness.

Moses D. A. Steen has been frequently called to conduct memorial services and act as chaplain and orator on public occasions. He has also published several sermons, essays, and contributed articles. In 1888 he was invited by the faculty to preach the annual sermon at San Joaquin Valley College, Woodbridge, Cal., which was received with favor, and a few days later at the annual session of the Board of Trustees they conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. In 1889 the University of Wooster, Ohio, conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, upon examination. The Wooster Quarterly, in speaking of it, says:

The degree was conferred on thesis and examination in Course A. The examination covered the course as published in 1887, and was superintended and certified by President D. A. Mobley, of San Joaquin College, Woodbridge. It was taken in ten sittings of two hours and a half each, the questions being given out in sections, and the examination papers consisted of seventy-six large and carefully-written pages. . . . Many of our readers will remember the sermon by Dr. Steen, which appeared in the Pulpit Supplement to the Quarterly. He is well known in California as an able and earnest preacher of the Word, and has been placed in honorable position by the Synod of the Pacific as a member of the Permanent Committee on Education.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. M. D. A. Steen was duly celebrated June 22, 1895, under the auspices of the King's Daughters. Many invitations had been sent out, the church profusely decorated, and as the wedding march was played the procession entered, headed by the King's Daughters and six little girls, all dressed in white, and bearing flowers. Rev. D. A. Mobley, D.D., ex-President of San Joaquin Valley College, performed an appropriate ceremony, and brief addresses were made by representatives of the church, the King's Daughters, several ministers and others. Congratulations, a happy reunion and a banquet followed. Among the many greetings received was the following little poem, written for the occasion by the Rev. James S. McDonald, D.D., formerly Superintendent of Home Missions in California:

MRS. MARY FOSTER STEEN.

Never did bells with sweeter tune
Laden the fragrant air of June,
And fill your hearts with such delight
And lure you to a path so bright,
As on the day when your new life
Began as happy man and wife.
The music of that joyful day
Has gained in sweetness all your way.

Discordant strains have never come
To mar the peace of your dear home,
Where lovers' hearts do not grow old
Their early love will not grow cold.
There is a joy love only knows,
That you may keep till life shall close;
When all your goodness shall increase
In God's eternal home of peace.

Dr. Steen has frequently been chosen Moderator of the Presbytery with which he has been connected. From 1887 until 1893 he was Permanent Clerk, and from 1893 to 1905 the Stated Clerk and Treasurer of the Presbytery of Stockton, which comprises a territory as large as the State of Ohio. He was chosen Commissioner to the Presbyterian General Assemblies which met in Madison, Wis., in 1880; Omaha, Neb., in 1887; Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in 1894, and Chicago, Ill., in 1914. In 1895 he was elected by the General Assembly at Pittsburgh, Pa., a delegate to the "General Council of Alliance of the Reformed Churches throughout the World Holding the Presbyterian System," to meet in Glasgow, Scotland, in June, 1896. On this journey he was accompanied by his wife, and after the Council they extended their visit to many places of interest in British and Continental Europe, returning to America via the Northern route, through the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, to Quebec, Montreal, the Thousand Islands, Kingston and Toronto, Canada.

In 1902 Dr. Steen, accompanied by his wife, made a very extended tour abroad, visiting the Madeira Islands, Portugal, Gibraltar, Spain, the Barbary Coast, Algiers, Malta, Greece, Constantinople, the Black Sea, Smyrna, Ephesus, the complete overland tour of the Holy Land on horseback and living in tents, Egypt, the Upper Nile, Sicily, Italy, Switzerland, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, England, Wales, Scotland, Ireland, etc., and returned to their home in California greatly benefited, having traveled on this journey more than twenty-two thousand miles.

Having previously received a unanimous invitation to the Presbyterian Church at Tracy, Cal., Dr. Steen resigned the pastorate of the Woodbridge Church October 14, 1902, and spent nearly two years at Tracy, during which time the church was put in a much better condition, the mortgage debt removed, and the church membership increased about one-third, nearly all on profession of faith. In the summer of 1904, owing to physical debility, the session of the church voted him a vacation, or leave of absence, for one year, in order to rest and recuperate his health; and having secured a good brother to supply the pulpit during his absence, he spent the year in rest at Worthington, Ohio. On returning to California, he accepted an invitation from Menlo Park, Cal., where he remained two years, until May, 1907, then returned to Ohio and accepted a call to the pastorate at Mowrystown, Ohio (only thirteen miles from where he had been brought up on his father's farm). During his pastorate at Mowrystown he was also the stated supply of the church at Sardinia, Ohio, four miles away. Residing in the manse at Mowrystown, he preached once every Sabbath in each church. He remained in Mowrystown, preaching also in Sardinia, from 1907 until 1910, then served the church at Ostrander, Ohio, from 1910 until 1914, when he retired in ill health to his home in Worthington, Ohio, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. The Presbytery of Stockton, at its stated meeting in Modesto, Cal., April 12, 1905, unanimously passed the following:

Be it resolved, That we send to our brother, Rev. M. D. A. Steen, D.D., the following appreciation: Dear brother, we accept with keen regret your resignation of the office of Stated Clerk, but rejoice that you are still a presbyter with us. We wish your never-failing and patient courtesy in the discharge of your duties as Stated Clerk be made a matter of record. As a charter member of our Presbytery you are one of the landmarks in the history of Presby-terianism in the San Joaquin Valley. Your labors on behalf of and for the good of Stockton Presbytery, aside from your official duties, have been abundant and well directed. We sincerely hope that you may be able to spend your declining years in and out among us, ministering in holy things and still bearing fruit in old age. May the dream of your age be the realized vision of your youth. And when your eyes grow dim, may the Word be a lamp unto your feet.

W. H. WIEMAN, Chairman of Committee.

Since April, 1908, Dr. Steen has been a member of the Presbytery of Chillicothe. He is the author of the following works: "Scriptural Sanctification," 1885; "How to be Saved," 1888; "The Human Soul," 1889; "History of the Presbytery of Stockton," 1898; "The Foster Family," "The Freeman Family," "The Steen Family," 1900; "The Steen Family in Europe and America, Revised and Enlarged Edition," 1916.

He has traveled quite extensively in the United States, Canada and Mexico. Including missionary work in the West with other journeys, he has visited every State and Territory in the American Union, except Alaska, and preached the Gospel in many of them; sometimes in the forest, in frontier settlements, in log cabins and schoolhouses, on river and ocean steamers, among Indians, Mexicans, and all classes and conditions of people — rich and poor, learned and illiterate. Residence, Worthington, Ohio.

Moses D. A. Steen was married by the Rev. William R. Parsons, at Worthington, Ohio, near Columbus, June 22, 1870, to Miss Mary Foster, a daughter of Archibald and Harriet C. Foster, formerly of Sugar Creek, Venango County, Pa., she having been born at Sugar Creek, Pa., July 21, 1845, and united with the Presbyterian Church at that place June 8, 1858, the same day that her husband joined the church in Ohio. She has ever been a true helpmeet to her husband in his sacred profession, cultivated, amiable and devout. From 1887 until 1904 she was the Stockton Presbyterial Secretary of the Woman's Occidental Board of Foreign Missions. The bride's father was a son of John Foster, who was born in County Armagh, Ireland, June 23, 1768; came to America when about twenty years of age; married Rebecca Lee in 1796, in Center County, Pennsylvania, where they resided until 1797, when he removed to Venango County, and located upon a farm at Sugar Creek, Pa. Mary Foster's mother was a daughter of John and Isabella McQuaid, a granddaughter of William and Elizabeth Duffield, and a great-granddaughter of Philip and Jane Armstrong Duffield, who owned real estate near Ballynahinch, in County Down, Ireland. William Duffield was the eldest child and only son of Philip and Jane Armstrong Duffield, was born in Ireland about 1744, came to America in 1770, was married in Mifflin County, Pennsylvania, in 1776, to Elizabeth Hasson, by whom he had seven children. Isabella Duffield was the sixth child of William and Elizabeth Hasson Duffield, and was born in Center County, Pennsylvania, November 15, 1790; was brought to Venango County in 1800, was married by Abram Selders in Franklin, Pa., September 8, 1808, to John McQuaid by whom she had six children. Harriet C. McQuaid, the second child and eldest daughter of John and Isabella Duffield McQuaid, was born in Venango County, Pennsylvania, November 5, 1811; was married by the Rev. Thomas Anderson at Sugar Creek, Pa., April 19, 1832, to Archibald Foster, he having been born at Sugar Creek, Pa., November 7, 1804, by whom she had twelve children, Mary Foster being the eighth child and fifth daughter. To Moses D. A. and Mary Foster Steen was born one child, as follows:

I.—Lulu Grace Steen was born in Conneautville, Crawford County, Pa., July 4, 1873, and died in Ludlow, Ky., July 3, 1876. On her third birthday her body was tenderly laid away to rest in the Woodlawn Cemetery, near Xenia, Ohio. She was a general favorite, the joy of the household, a remarkably bright and interesting child, affectionate, obedient, patient, yet full of life and enthusiasm. She was intelligent beyond her years, and devotional to an eminent degree. She delighted in family worship, and often in her play would sit down and act as though she were reading, then close the book, kneel down by a chair, cover her face with her hands, and reverently say: "God bless Lulu and make her a good girl; God bless papa and make him a good man; God bless mamma and make her a good lady. Amen."

6. Josiah James Steen, the sixth son of Aaron F. and Mary

LULU GRACE STEEN.

Freeman Steen, was born at the old Freeman homestead, on Scioto Brush Creek, near Blue Creek, Adams County, Ohio, February 25, 1844, and died at the same place September 8, 1844, aged 8 months and 13 days. "A sweet little bud taken from the earth to bloom in heaven."

7. Sarah Catherine Steen (called "Kate"), the seventh child and only daughter of Aaron F. and Mary Freeman Steen, was born at the home of her parents, three miles east of Winchester, Adams County, Ohio, April 1, 1853, where her happy childhood days were spent. She attended the public school, the church and Sabbath school at Mount Leigh when she was still a child. She removed with her parents to their new home, at Xenia, Ohio, in the summer of 1865, when she was twelve years of age, and in early life united with the First Presbyterian Church of that place, and of which she was a useful member. At Xenia she received a good education in the common schools, and was graduated from the high school in 1872. Like her father and elder brothers, she was possessed of unusually fine musical talents, which she delighted to cultivate and exercise; and under the continuous instruction of her brother, Professor E. W. Steen, she soon acquired a cultivated voice, skill in execution, and became an accomplished teacher of vocal and instrumental music. In 1879 she taught music in Clarksville, Tenn. After the death of her father, in 1881, she, with her mother, removed to the center of the city of Xenia, where they lived together, and she gave music lessons to many private pupils. In 1883 she accepted the position of teacher of vocal music and voice culture in Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio, but still making her home with her mother in Xenia, and traveling back and forth by rail until January 1, 1886, when they removed to Yellow Springs, Ohio. She died at her home in Marietta, Ohio, August 9, 1901, aged 48 years, 4 months and 8 days. Her body was laid away to rest in a beautiful spot in the Marietta Cemetery.

Sarah Catherine (Kate) Steen was married by the Rev. John S. Axtell at Xenia, Ohio, December 24, 1885, to the Rev. Elijah Alfred Coil, a son of Jesse A. and Lydia Coil, he having been born May 2, 1858, and brought up on his father's farm, near Delphos, Allen County, Ohio. VII.—Alexander Boyd Steen, the seventh child and fourth son of Alexander and Agnes Nancy Faris Steen, and a twin brother of John Work Steen, was born at the home of his parents, on a farm, two miles north of Flemingsburg, Ky., May 5, 1813, and died at his residence, three miles east of Winchester, Ohio, in the early morning of March 8, 1895, aged 81 years, 10 months and 3 days. His body was lovingly laid away to rest the next day, in the cemetery at Mount Leigh, near which place he had resided for almost seventy-five years. He was brought by his parents into Ohio in 1820, and ever afterward lived in the vicinity of his father's first settlement in Ohio, three miles east of Winchester, as a practical and successful farmer. Alexander B. Steen was a child of the covenant, and descended from a long line of stanch Scotch-Irish Presbyterian ancestors, who had endured persecutions and suffered imprisonment for the sake of their religious faith. He was a most saintly man, "greatly beloved" by all who knew him, and his gentleness of manner, sweet devotion and absorbing zeal reminded one of our ideal good old Apostle John. He occupied comparatively a humble sphere and was very unpretentious, but no man in all that region of country exerted a wider religious influence than he. In private conversation his spiritual insight and heavenly-mindedness was a real uplift to the soul. His faith in God's Word was unbounded, and the divine promises were living realities. He was no mere idle dreamer, thinking only of the future glory, but insisted upon the faithful performance of the practical duties of to-day. He was not a learned man, but yet was more familiar with the English Bible than many professors of theology, and would quote from memory the chapter and verse to substantiate his position on any subject of conversation. "It says" was a satisfactory answer to him on any subject, and an end to all controversy. He was frequently called to positions in the church, but always humbly declined, thinking he could serve God more acceptably in a private station. By a fall some years before his death he was severely injured in the hips, which largely confined him to the house. This he afterward spoke of as a special blessing of providence, inasmuch as it gave him a better opportunity to study the Scriptures. He brought up his family of eight children in the fear of the Lord, and it was his privilege and great joy to see them all brought into the Christian fold, members of the same church with which he was connected for more than fifty years. Three of his brothers and four of his sons have been ruling elders in the Presbyterian Church. Alexander B. Steen was married by the Rev. Robert Steward, near Harshasville, Adams County, Ohio, to Miss Nancy Jane McClure, a daughter of Michael and Elizabeth McClure, she having been born in Hillsboro, Highland County, Ohio, September 11, 1821, and died March 18, 1893, aged 71 years, 5 months and 7 days. To Alexander B. and Nancy J. Steen were born the following children:

1. Mary Jane Steen, the eldest child and only daughter of Alexander B. and Nancy J. Steen, was born on the old Grandfather Steen homestead, near the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church, in Adams County, Ohio, February 26, 1839, where she spent her childhood and attended school. She early united with the Mount Leigh Church and grew up to be a young lady of winning manners, kindly heart, devout spirit and intelligent interest in everything good. She died at the home of her parents, on Brush Creek, about four miles northeast of Winchester, Ohio, January 27, 1857, aged 17 years, 10 months and 25 days, much beloved by those who knew her.
2. John Alexander Steen, the second child and eldest son of Alexander B. and Nancy Jane Steen, was born on the old Grandfather Steen homestead, near Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church, in Adams County, Ohio, March 26, 1841. Here he spent his early days, working upon the farm in summer and attending the Mount Leigh school in winter. About 1855 he removed with his parents to their new home and farm on Brush Creek, about two miles away, where he continued to live until he became of age. With several other young friends and relatives he united with the Mount Leigh Presbyterian Church, June 9, 1858, and has ever maintained a consistent Christian character. He enlisted in the army at Winchester, Ohio, August 1, 1862, in Company I, Ninety-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served his country faithfully until the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged.

John A. Steen served three years in the army, was a veteran and a real hero. He was in nineteen hard-fought battles and skirmishes, among which were Buffalo, Cloyd Mountain, Fayetteville, Lewisburg, Martinsburg, Harper's Ferry and Charleston, all in Virginia. He was called to endure many hardships during the war. At one time they were cut off from their supplies, and had to march through the rough mountains from Charleston, W. Va., to Lynchburg, old Virginia, on the James River, and back again to Charleston in seventeen days and nights. He was without anything to eat for six or seven days, except what could be gathered by the way, such as birch bark, pawpaws, etc. They were finally met by their provision train at Hawk's Nest, on the New River. His last battle was at Winchester, Va., September 19, 1864, where his brother, James, and uncle, Ira Hays, were killed. He himself was severely wounded in the throat and arm about three o'clock in the afternoon. He lay on the battlefield until midnight, when he was picked up by an ambulance, taken into Winchester and placed in the M. E. Church. In about fifteen minutes he was taken back again into the ambulance and driven about five miles to a fort across O'Kakon Creek, on the Berryville Pike, where his wounds were dressed, and his arm set about ten o'clock the next day. He was then taken back to Winchester, and from there to Harper's Ferry, where a railroad ticket was given him to Baltimore. He wanted to get as far into the North as possible, to the best hospital and the most convenient communication with his home. He thought he could not go to Baltimore, where Abraham Lincoln was stoned on his way to Washington to be made President. And so, when the two trains backed up into the station to take the wounded soldiers to the hospitals, one for Baltimore, Md., the other to Philadelphia, Pa., he just walked over to the Philadelphia train and got on board, spread his blankets down on the floor of the box car and rested as easily as possible until the train started. And when it was fairly under way he put his ticket through a crack in the floor, after which, when the conductor came around for his ticket, he said: "My ticket went through that crack." He was taken to Philadelphia. On the way the wind blew hard, and in crossing a bridge he lost his hat. When they arrived in Philadelphia, on Sunday afternoon, a great crowd had gathered to meet the wounded soldiers. One sweet young lady said to her friend: "Just look at that poor boy over there! He has lost HIS hat. Won't you please give him yours? You can get another." And so he took off his hat and handed it to John A. Steen. Now, after fifty years, he would like to know that lady and take that generous young man by the hand. His hospital record in Philadelphia was very pleasant, for all the doctors and nurses were both sympathetic and kind. He remained there until the following May, when he asked to be returned to his regiment to look after his brother's and uncle's remains, which had been buried on the battlefield.

After the war he studied dentistry under Dr. John N. McClung, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and practiced his profession with good success in North Liberty, Ohio, until November 13, 1875, when he removed to Ripley, Ohio, where he still carries on an extensive and profitable business. Here he united with the First Presbyterian Church, of which he is a useful and influential member. He is a genial, kind-hearted man, always has a pleasant word for every one, is widely known, and wins hosts of friends wherever he goes.

Dr. John A. Steen was married by Rev. James R. Gibson, at the residence of the bride's parents, near Eckmansville, Adams County, Ohio, December 29, 1869, to Miss Jennie M. L. and Mary Childers, she having been born July 2, 1853. Residence, Oklahoma, Oklahoma County, Okla. Rev. Joseph W. Ball writes as follows, giving additional information concerning the family:

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 3, 1900.

My parents removed from Hancock County, Illinois, to Fort Madison, Iowa, where we resided for several years. From this place father made his first trip to California, in 1851, leaving his three boys, George, Morrow and myself, with mother. He was gone three years and six months, when he returned home and remained three years and three months. The family then removed to Macon City, Mo., from which place father went to Pike's Peak, remaining two years and six months. During this time the Civil War broke out, and mother removed with the family to Adams County, Illinois, where we all remained until father returned to us, in 1861. We continued at this place until the spring of 1863, when father and mother thought best to return to California again, which we did. We started April 28, 1863, going overland. We had to use horses and wagons, and father had selected the very best that could be had. We drove to Keokuk, Iowa; the roads being muddy, we shipped to Eddyville, and then drove over to Omaha, where we organized into a train numbering twenty-six wagons. Father was appointed Captain of the train, and we traveled up the North Platte River for nine hundred miles. We had many adventures, too numerous to mention, but there was one incident which I will relate. At Horse Shoe Bend, on the Platte River, we were attacked by the Sioux Indians, who succeeded in capturing our horses, leaving only one horse in the entire train. Fortunately for father, he was traveling with a train of ox teams, and had extra yokes and bows, so that we were able to get started again, and finally reached Uncle Wells Phillips, who lived four miles from the summit, where we stopped for a while and rested up. We then went on to Sacramento, Cal., where we remained two years, and returned to the States by way of the Isthmus of Panama thence to New York, and from there to Mercer County, Pennsylvania, where Brother John S. Mitchell and family lived, and near the place where father and mother were brought up and married. From that place father and mother, Brother Dan and Sister Mary went West to Illinois, leaving Brother George and myself in Mercer County, Pennsylvania, where George was married. Soon after his marriage I also went West, to where father and mother were. Not long afterward I went over into Lewis County, Missouri, where I remained for some time, forming quite a number of new acquaintances, among whom I was enabled to select a most worthy and lovable wife, and a new era was begun in my life. In 1887, at the age of forty years, I was licensed to preach in the M. E. Church (South), in Knox County, Missouri. In the fall of 1893 I was transferred to the Indians Mission Conference; having a justifiable cause, I withdrew from this Conference and joined the Congregational Church. I am now a licensed minister in the Southeast Association of the Congregational Church, and have three appointments. I am living on my farm, eight miles west of Oklahoma City, in what is called the wheat belt, and the wheat is looking well at this writing. We have had fourteen children, thirteen of whom are still living—eight boys and five girls; twelve were born in Missouri and the two last in Oklahoma Territory. We have two children married, but no grandchildren.

I am yours,

JOSEPH W. BALL.

BOOK SEVEN

DESCENDANTS OF JAMES STEEN.*

JAMES STEEN was born about 1730 in the north of Ireland, probably at or near a place called "The Vow." He was married about 1751 to Rachel Moore, of Moore Lodge, and lived near "The Vow," or perhaps on the old "Green Hill" farm, which is a part of that tract; located about eight Irish miles from Coleraine, near the bank of the River Bann, in County Antrim, Province of Ulster, Ireland, where they brought up a family of several children, the most of whom emigrated to America. James Steen was a man of sterling integrity of character, was true to his principles and faithful in his adherence to the doctrines and practices of his ancestors. A grandson, who was named for him, sends this message to the writer of this record: "Preach Christ and him crucified to the Bethel people under your charge, never forgetting Christ's crown and covenant, your beautiful ancestral pride. They bowed to no being but their God, and never turned the back to the foe — at Derry, Aughrim, the Boyne, or in defense of William's Liberating Army under Derry's walls. I suppose you want to make a family tree, and, I must say so, you need not be ashamed of it. Geneva, Calvin, the French reformer — then we fall back on Scotland, then Ulster in A. D. 1707." To James and Rachel Moore Steen were born several children.

SECTION I.

Enoch Steen, a son of William Steen, was born on his father's farm, near Harrodsburg, Ky., February 22, 1800, and died in Kansas City, Mo., January 22, 1880, in the eightieth year of his age. Enoch Steen served as a soldier and officer in the United States Army for a period of about forty-eight years, i. e., from 1832 until his death, in 1880. When the Civil War broke out he was Colonel, commanding the fort at Walla Walla, Washington Territory. There is a mountain in Idaho called "Steen's Mountain," named after him in consequence of a severe battle he fought at that place with the Snake Indians, in 1858 or 1859. He was retired from active service in the United States Army, about 1868, as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Second United States Cavalry. Colonel Enoch Steen was married three times, and had children by his first and second wife, but none by his third. He was married first in St. Louis, Mo., in 1824, to Mrs. Mary Rector McPherson. Her maiden name was Mary Rector. To them were born three children. He was married a second time, in 1849, to Mrs. Mary Selkirk Walsh, whose maiden name was Mary Selkirk, by whom he had two children. He resigned his commission and gave his services and his life to the South. He was very soon placed in command of a brigade in the Confederate Army, and served with great bravery and distinction throughout the war, and was killed in one of the last battles at Prairie Grove, Ark. BOOK TEN

DESCENDANTS OF MOSES STEEN.

MOSES STEEN was born at Culmore, Ireland, near Londonderry, in 1718, and died at the same place December 19, 1795, aged 77 years. The old homestead at Culmore is a delightful place, overlooking Loch Foyle, and with a fine prospect out to the sea. All the vessels that enter the harbor pass near by, and the view from beneath the shady trees is picturesque and interesting. The house stands upon a gentle slope above the water, and the ruins of the old church, where the family used to worship, are in full view. The cemetery near by marks the final resting place of Moses Steen, his wife, several of their children and many of their descendants. The ancestors of Moses Steen were originally refugees from Romish persecution in Holland. Leaving everything behind them except their religion, they first came into Scotland, where they continued for several generations. They afterward crossed over into Ireland as early as the reign of James I, about 1620, or perhaps a few years later. They settled at Culmore, on the banks of the Foyle, about four miles below Londonderry. In the course of time they were scattered abroad, and families of Steens sprang up in many different localities. They were a noble band of earnest Presbyterian Christians, who had been called to suffer for their religious principles, but determined to maintain their freedom of conscience and liberty of worship at all hazards. Moses Steen was married near Londonderry, about 1750, to a Miss Nelson, she having been born in 1721, and died August 12, 1784. They lived at Culmore, where they brought up a family of children. They often conversed with the men who defended Londonderry from the 18th of December until the close of the awful siege. Moses Steen used to tell his children and his grandchildren how during the terrible siege of 1688 his own father and grandfather were driven under the walls of Derry by Rouen, the French General, in order that their privations and cries might compel the besieged to surrender. This cruel plan, however, failed. It enabled the weak and helpless in the city to get out, and the able-bodied to go in and carry on the defense, until William, the Prince of Orange, succeeded in breaking through the blockade, and by his conquering army and ship-loads of provisions brought relief to the starving Protestants. To Moses Steen and his wife, formerly a Miss Nelson, were born three children, as follows: Thomas, Alexander and Mary Steen.

There is also a William Steen so closely related to this family that the record of himself and his descendants is inserted as Chapter IV of this Book.

His active ministry in the vicinity of Limavady was a faithful, able and devoted service of more than sixty-four years. In many respects he was a remarkable man — strong physically, mentally and religiously. The writer visited his home in 1896 and found him in the ninetyeth year of his age, still actively engaged in preaching the Gospel regularly once each Sabbath, with a warm heart and a mind of clear and quick perception, deeply interested in all the religious, literary and civil affairs of the day. CHAPTER IV.

DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM STEEN.

This William Steen was not a descendant of Moses Steen, as would be supposed by the name appearing at this place. He was the only son of a William Steen who had a first cousin by the name of Thomas Steen that lived in Londonderry. It is probable that he was a descendant of a brother of the Moses Steen who married a Miss Nelson, and whose record we have not obtained. Thus the father of William Steen was a full cousin to Thomas Steen, the son of Moses Steen, whose father and grandfather were in the siege of Derry. At any rate, they were closely-related families.

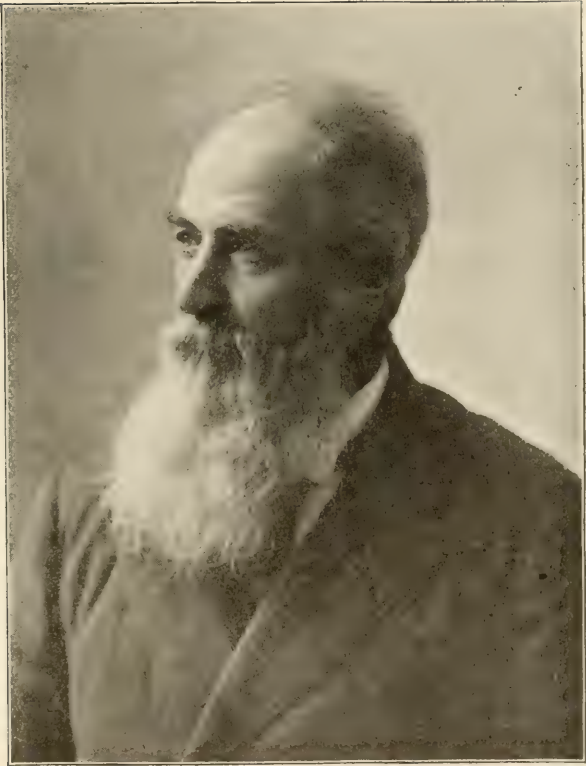

I.—William Steen, a son of William Steen, and possibly a grand-nephew of Moses Steen, was born at Culmore, County Donegal, near Londonderry, Ireland, in 1774. He was married in 1795 to Rebecca Weylie, she having been born in Linmore, Ireland, in 1774. After marriage they continued to live in Culmore, County Donegal, until 1822, when they removed with their whole family to America, and located on a farm on the Credit River (a stream which flows into Lake Ontario), situated in Toronto Township, in the County of Peel, Ontario, Canada, about four miles from the present village of Streetsville, and about twenty miles from the city of Toronto. Here in this new country they opened up a farm, and by industry and economy became prosperous. The whole family were sturdy Presbyterians, as their fathers were, having been brought up and educated in that faith for generations. They have exerted a great influence in molding the character of the people in that whole region, which influence a numerous posterity still perpetuates. A large proportion of the Steen family relationship living near Streetsville are prosperous farmers and a healthy race. Nearly all of them are members of the Presbyterian Church, and worship together in the congregation of the Presbyterian Church in Streetsville, Ontario, and form a large portion of that congregation. It was the writer's great privilege to visit this locality, associate with these friends and worship in this church, in the autumn of 1896. To William and Rebecca Weylie Steen were born eleven children, as follows:

- I. Mary Steen, the eldest child, a daughter of William and Rebecca Weylie Steen, was born in Culmore, Ireland, about 1798. She was married at the home of her parents, on the Credit River, near Streetsville, Ontario, in 1823, to John Brown, who came to America in the same ship from County Donegal, Ireland. They resided in York County, Ontario. To John and Mary Steen Brown were born thirteen children. The last place they lived was at Cleveland, Ohio, U. S. A. Among their children were four whose names are unknown to the writer, but the names of the following nine of their children are given:

I.—Rebecca Brown. II.—Nathaniel Brown. III.—Mary Ann Brown. IV.—Jane Brown. V.—Nancy Brown. VI.—John Brown. VII.—Isabella Brown. VIII.—Sarah Brown. IX.—Rachel Brown.

They live somewhere in the United States of America.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Steen celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Monday, September 4, 1916. On this delightful occasion all the members of their family and eleven of their grandchildren were present, a unique feature being that the bridesmaid and groomsman of half a century ago were among the guests, Miss Elizabeth Cumming, a sister of Mrs. Steen, and Mr. William McCracken, of Meadowvale. Nathaniel Steen has for many years been identified with the life of the community, being a stanch Conservative, a P. D. Your daughter, once your baby girl,
But now a woman grown,
Has come from far to visit us,
With him she calls her own.

We welcomed her for Irwin's sake,
Because she was his wife;
We love her now for her own sake,
And claim her ours for life.

Your heart, no doubt, was somewhat sad
When called to part your child;
But ours was glad when she came here
To stay with us a while.

They spent as lovers may
In their sweet honeymoon,
And now that they are gone from us,
We feel they're gone too soon.

With youthful health upon their side,
From honest stock they came;
We feel we'll never fear for them,
Or blush to hear their name.

And as they build their humble home
In their adopted land,
We can not be beside them there,
But pray for them we can.

May truth and wisdom guide their bark
 As o'er life's sea they sail,
 And faith and love their anchor be
 In every stormy gale.

May hope and courage nerve their arms
 Their duty well to do,
 And heaven's blessing rest on them
 Their whole life's journey through.

May flowers blossom 'round their path,
 And blessings yet unseen
 In plenty come to Margaret Pearl
 And Robert Irwin Steen.

Two children of the covenant they,
 To the Lord in childhood given;
 We wish for them a happy life,
 And then a home in heaven.

of their happy married life. Among the interesting things on that occasion, Mrs. J. J. Morgan read "She Liked Him Rale Weel," and Mr. E. O. Gale, of Chicago, read the following original poem:

TO MR. AND MRS. ASA HALL ON THEIR SILVER WEDDING.

How these occasions conjure up those days we all remember,
When Love's bright June ruled all the year, with roses hid December ;

When we first wooed these wives of ours and felt so much elated
In looking forward to the time when to them we'd be mated.
How bright to us appeared those days, no matter what the weather,
Yet brighter far the evenings were in bringing us together ;
And oft in thought we walk those lanes with arms entwined serenely,

And gaze again on that dear girl who walked with us so queenly.
Those blissful hours do we recall, so filled with holy pleasure,
We would not blot their memory out for any earthly treasure.

If love can give to hearts in youth so much of pure enjoyment,
Can it be wise for married folks to find it no employment?
If we conceived ecstatic bliss when we our troth had plighted,
Should we not happier be to-day for all these years united?
Our lives are shaped by little things, by chafings or caressings ;
Who keeps in age the love of youth, holds fast the highest blessings.

And when at length the hour came, so happy, yet momentous,
We took her hand whose heart we claimed the Lord had kindly sent us ;

We felt a knightly chivalry, to us e'en now appealing,
As we to cherish, love, protect, with sacred vows were sealing.

We needed not those vows to bind, though friends had given weeping ;

We felt the bride, through God, would find true bliss when in our keeping.

As we those idols of their homes with us away were taking,
We saw we filled those homes with sighs, left hearts there almost breaking ;

Yet we had such abiding faith in the roseate hues before us,
We knew our love eclipsing theirs, for her who did adore us.
'Tis true we could not sound that love, but sure it was abiding,
And in our souls we pledged for life its strength to her confiding.

And knowing that our friends as guest have always welcomed
Cupid —

And who does not, as years roll by, grow more supremely stupid?—
We with our hearts congratulate to find them still pursuing
Those little courtesies of life we all paid in our wooing;
But apt in time to quite ignore, and much thereby is missing,
For who would think of praising wives or startle them by kissing!
Yet being boarder now and then, should I catch "Ase and Tilly," Forgetting they had married been, were still remaining silly,
Do you suppose I'd neighbors tell, as fun at Hall in making?
Not much; lest it like measles prove, which are so awful taking.
Keep on, my friends, in future years, as in these five-and-twenty,
And may the Father, who is Love, crown you with love and plenty.

BOOK ELEVEN

DESCENDANTS OF JAMES STEEN.

JAMES STEEN was born in Scotland, and resided there until near middle life, when he went over into Ireland about 1620, along with three brothers at the same time. They were refugees from religious persecution in Scotland and went to Ireland for liberty of conscience, and freedom to worship God according to the teachings of the Bible as they understood it. They located at Culmore, on the banks of the River Foyle, about four miles below the city of Londonderry, in the county of the same name. The writer visited the place in 1877, again in 1896, and again in 1902, and found it a delightful place, overlooking Loch Foyle, and with a fine prospect out to the sea. All the vessels that enter the harbor pass near by, and the view from beneath the shady trees is picturesque and interesting. It was here that they brought up their families in the love and fear of God, and the cemetery near by marks the resting place of many bearing the family name. One of the descendants of this James Steen, and whose name was also James Steen, was born in the County of Londonderry, Ireland, in 1756, and removed to the United States of America in early life.

CHAPTER I.

JAMES STEEN, a descendant of the James Steen who went into Ireland about 1620 — one of the persecuted Scotch Covenanters — was born in the Province of Ulster, County of Londonderry, at or near Culmore, Ireland, in 1756, where he was brought up. In early life he removed to the United States and located in Pennsylvania. He arrived in Philadelphia in February, 1776, and eleven weeks later, April 28, 1776, joined the Colonial Army. He enlisted as a private in Captain John Marshall's Company, in the Pennsylvania Rifle Regiment; was afterward transferred to Captain Bentley's Company, and served during the Revolutionary War. Family tradition has it that he was an officer and close to Washington. From his letters to his father in Ireland this seems to be true, but as there is no record of it in the Pennsylvania Archives, he was probably a non-commissioned officer. (See Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series, Volume II, page 335, etc. See also Fifth Series, Pennsylvania Archives, Volume V, page 806.) So far as known to his descendants he was the only member of his family that came to this country. According to tradition he had one sister, Margaret, who went to England and was lost trace of.

After the close of the war James Steen was married near Philadelphia, Pa., to Margaret Reynolds, of Scotch blood, said to belong to the family of Sir John Reynolds. A few years after their marriage they came across the mountains and settled in Brooke County, Virginia, now West Virginia, within the pan handle between the Ohio River and the Pennsylvania State line, on a farm still owned and occupied by their descendants. At the time of this migration they were the parents of three children. Their home was in Virginia, but about one-half of the farm extended over the line into Washington County, Pennsylvania. The will of James Steen was written June 16, 1831, and registered in March, 1833. He died at his home in Brooke County, Virginia, in 1832, and the bodies of both himself and wife lie buried in the Tent graveyard near Burgettstown, Washington County, Pa. The date of birth and death of the "old folks" — that is, the children of James and Margaret Reynolds Steen — except that of his son,

James Steen, can probably be found recorded on the gravestones in the Tent graveyard near Burgettstown, or Cross Creek village cemetery, in Washington County, Pennsylvania, near the farm where they were all born, married, lived and died. To James and Margaret Reynolds Steen were born the following children:

He was married in 1778 to Nancy Schoals, she also having been born in 1759, and died December 17, 1847, aged 88 years. Her body rests by the side of her husband. John Steen came to Balleney from Largetea, about four miles southeast of Limavady, about the year 1784, and bought the townland of Balleney, nearly two hundred acres, upon which he continued to reside during the remainder of his life. He was a prosperous farmer and an influential and useful man. He lived to see the fifth generation from himself, coming through his eldest son, James, his grandson, John, and his great-grandson, James, whose little daughter he lived to see and dandle upon his knee. John and Nancy Schoals brought up a family of six children, all born on the townland of Balleney, near Coleraine, Ireland, their names being as follows: James, Thomas, Conolly, Philip, John and Isaiah Steen.

Dr. Robert Steen was a gentleman of very amiable qualities, a great favorite with his pupils, who for more than a quarter of a century were educated in the institution. He was, if possible, held in still higher esteem by the vast number of young gentlemen who passed through the boarding school connected with his department, and thus had a closer acquaintance with him and better opportunities for knowing him in the private relationship of life. The following article is copied from The Northern Whig, a Belfast newspaper published the day after his death:

Death, ever busy in our midst, has removed yet another man who has played the part of wide usefulness in the community. The announcement in our columns of the passing away of Dr. Robert Steen will awake no mere perfunctory expressions of regret. So long and so closely connected with the Royal Academical Institution, apart from his extended social relations, he had come in contact with large numbers of those who afterward came to occupy prominent positions in the learned professions and in the business world. Of these it is not too much to say that those who first knew him as a teacher came to value him as a friend, his friendship thus linking the associations of a pleasant school life with those of an after career. This was the inevitable result of the fine personal qualities of the man. Ever mindful of the educational interests of those intrusted to him, never careless in matters of discipline, those interests were all the better served and discipline all the more readily maintained through the kindness of heart, the cheery manners and unfailing geniality which were characteristic of him. It was a matter of sincere regret to all who had been under his care, and to his many friends, when failing health rendered it advisable that he should relinquish the position he had occupied so long, though they would have been well contented that he should for any other reason enter upon a period of merited leisure. The cordial attachment felt toward him was clearly shown at the time of his retirement, and will be more strongly marked in the sorrow manifested in his decease.

2. John Steen, the second son of David and Eleanor Peoples Steen, was married to Rosanna George. To them was born one son, as follows:

I.—David Steen, only son of John and Rosanna George Steen, was born near Limavady, in the Province of Ulster, Ireland, in December, 1851. He was ordained and installed pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Islandmagee August 14, 1877, and has continued in charge of the church ever since. This church stands upon the very spot of the oldest Presbyterian church in Ireland. Since the time of the settlement of Ulster, Islandmagee has been inhabited almost entirely by Presbyterians, and no more peaceful and industrious community can be found in all Ireland. It is situated just across the bay from Larne, the port of entry of the short route from Scotland. It is twenty miles from Belfast, the chief city of Ireland, and is reached by sixteen miles of railway and four miles by jaunting car. In June, 1896, it was the writer's privilege to visit this old historic place, spend two days with the pastor, and preach the Gospel to these people.

This church dates from the early years of the seventeenth century, when Edward Brice preached to the people of Islandmagee and Broad Island. He died in 1636, after having been sentenced to deposition by the Bishop of Down and Conner. The next minister was Henry Maine, who was imprisoned in Carrickfergus by Venables. The next minister was William Mill, from Aberdeen, Scotland. He was succeeded by John Haltridge, who was ordained in Islandmagee May 8, 1672, survived the Revolution and died in 1697, having attended the Synod at Antrim with his elder, James Wilson, in 1692. The next minister of this historic church was Robert Sinclair, who was ordained in 1704 and died in 1731. The records of the Synod of Ulster show that he took a leading part in its business and was always accompanied by an elder. The names of some of these elders of two hundred years ago still appear in the present list, the descendants to the fifth and sixth generations of those who love the Lord still dwelling in the same house of the Lord. The Rev. Robert Sinclair was succeeded by Robert Leather, who was ordained in 1733. The next minister was George Heron, who was ordained in 1747, and transferred to a living in 1757. He was succeeded by James Dunbar, who was ordained in 1758. The next minister was James McAuley, ordained in 1769. His successor was David Kerr, who removed to America in 1788. The next minister was John Murphy, who was ordained in 1789. He was a skilled physician, and ministered to the bodies of men as well as to their souls. It was during his administration that the secession congrega-gation, now known as the Second Islandmagee Presbyterian Church, was established. Mr. Murphy died in 1842, in the eighty-seventh year of his age and the fifty-third year of his ministry. William Campbell, the next minister, was ordained April 14, 1829, and during the early years of his ministry he planted the trees which now form the beautiful grove that adorns the grounds surrounding the church building. He was a man greatly beloved and died August 17, 1876.

REV. DAVID STEEN, the present beloved pastor, was the next minister, the thirteenth in the regular order of succession. He has served the church since August 17, 1877. During his administration the congregation has built an excellent manse, a school and stables, at a cost of $6,000. In 1896 they were considering the question of erecting an elegant new church edifice, suitable to the needs and worthy the historic importance of the place. They had glorious and inspiring memories to stimulate and encourage them in their task. They stand at the very cradle of Irish Presbyterianism, the descendants of the heroic men who almost three centuries ago planted Presbyterianism in Ireland in the midst of much privation and religious persecution. The congregation now consists of three hundred and thirty families, of which two hundred seamen first contributed generously themselves and then proceeded to raise funds among their friends in different parts of the world, while the remainder of the congregation rendered faithful and efficient service at home. The new church, suitable to the place, was erected in 1900 and 1901. It has a seating capacity of eight hundred and cost about $15,000. It was opened for the worship of God and solemnly dedicated to his service July 16, 1901, by the Rev. Professor James Heron, D.D., Moderator of the General Assembly. The Rev. David Steen was married in the English Church at Copenhagen, Denmark, June 9, 1897, to Matilda Wilson Rennie, a daughter of Thomas W. Rennie, C.E., of Copenhagen. Residence, The Manse, Islandmagee, Ireland. To them were born the following children, all born in Islandmagee, Ireland:

1. Hannah Rosanna Steen was born September 15, 1899.

6. William Steen, the fifth and youngest child, the third son of David and Eleanor Peoples Steen, lived in Pennsylvania.

SECTION 2.

James Steen, the second son of James and Ann Scales Steen, was born in Ballybay, County Monaghan, in the Province of Ulster, Ireland. He was married there to Jane Small, a Scotch Covenanter, who was related to the Pedens and Smalls of Edinburgh, Scotland. They removed to America, about 1793, with their daughter, Mary, and a nephew, George A. Steen, and lived in Philadelphia, Pa., many years. They removed to Washington, D. C., where they resided several years, and finally settled in Morgantown, Va., where they spent the remainder of their lives. James Steen was by trade a carpenter. To them were born six children, as follows:

CHAPTER VIII.

John Steen was a descendant of the persecuted Scotch Covenanters who went over from Scotland into the North of Ireland, about 1620, for the sake of religious freedom, and located upon the banks of the Foyle, about four miles from the city of Londonderry. John Steen was probably a great-great-great-grandson of either James Steen or one of his brothers, who went from Scotland into Ireland at the same time. This John Steen was born and brought up in County Londonderry, Ireland. He was married and lived in Londonderry for a while, where his children were all born, but he removed with his family to America while they were very young and located in Kittanning, Armstrong County, Pa., where he continued to reside. To John Steen and his wife were born at least two sons, and probably other children.

SECTION I.

I.—John Steen was the son of John Steen, and was born in Londonderry, County Londonderry, Ireland, probably about 1807. He was brought to America by his parents while young, and grew up to manhood in his father's family at Kittanning, Pa., and where it is supposed he was married and brought up his family.

II.—Robert Mae Steen was the son of John Steen, and was born in Londonderry, Ireland, November 16, 1810, and died at his home, near Sturges, Mo., January 12, 1894, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. He was brought to America by his parents when very young. When just a small boy, about the year 1818, he ran away from home and went to sea, where he spent his early life. He never returned to his father's family in Pennsylvania and had but little knowledge of them. Robert M. Steen was married in Gibson County, Indiana, in 1836, to Jane Culbertson, a daughter of Andrew Culbertson, she having been born in Gibson County, Indiana, January 17, 1821, and died at the old family home, near Sturges, Livingston County, Mo., January 28, 1899, aged 78 years and 7 days. The Culbertsons were originally Scotch Covenanters, who took refuge in the North of Ireland from the persecutions of Claverhouse and others. From Ireland they emigrated to America and settled in Pennsylvania. They are now widely scattered and live in many States. This family is Scotch-Irish on both sides and well connected. In 1839 Robert M. Steen and his wife removed to the West and located upon a farm in Rich Hill Township, Livingston County, Missouri, where they continued to reside, and where they brought up a family of nine children, as follows:

1. John Andrew Steen, the eldest child, a son of Robert M. and Jane Culbertson Steen, was born in Rich Hill Township, Livingston County, Missouri, June 18, 1840. He was named after both of his grandparents — John Steen and Andrew Culbertson. In 1860, when he was twenty years of age, he removed to Texas, and the next year enlisted in the Confederate Army. He served under General Bragg during the Civil War, 1861 to 1865. He was badly wounded in battle at Richmond, Ky., and left on the field as dead, but afterward he was picked up and carried to the hospital, where he was carefully treated by Dr. D. M. Barkley, and finally recovered. He was for many years a prominent attorney-at-law, and County Judge of Concho County, Texas, until his death, October 5, 1899. He was widely known and an influential citizen. He writes:

"I came into Texas in 1860, and have met several Steens and heard of several more. They figured considerably in the early history of Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. The old ones are mostly dead, but their descendants are yet to be found. They are all of Scotch-Irish descent. I saw several Steens when in Bragg's army, east of the Mississippi, but do not know their place of residence. Major Steen, an old settler at Beeville, Bee County, Texas, a prominent and noted character, was, I think, from Louisiana. Judge Max Steen was killed in Old Mexico about 1891. He was a judge in one of the southern counties of Texas. There was a John Steen in Bosque County, Texas, years ago. Also the family of C. C. Steen, known as the 'Kit Steen' family. He also had a brother, Abe Steen, and a sister who married a Mr. Bennett, living somewhere in the Indian Territory, I think in the Choctaw Nation. The Steens in Bosque County, Texas, are the children of John Steen and George Steen, who came into the State from Southeast Missouri. I knew George Steen well during the war. John Steen was killed there. I have heard different reports concerning it, as that he was mobbed as a spy, and that he was killed by the Indians, but I never did know the truth of the matter. At any rate, I hear that he was a good man and that his sons were good men. Richard C. Steen belongs, I think, to a different family than the Steen's Creek Steens, of which you wrote; that is, they are not closely connected, but still are of the same stock of the early Steens of that country. They lived near Steenston, Lowndes County, Miss., but over the line in Alabama."

Judge John A. Steen was married in Denton County, Texas, January 18, 1871, to Rebecca Frances Manning, she having been born in Springfield, Mo., March 4, 1847. Family residence, Paint Rock, Concho County, Texas. They were the parents of six children, as follows:

BOOK TWELVE

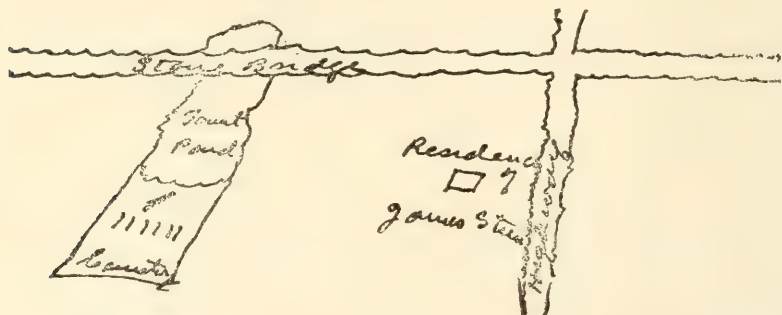

The coat-of-arms of the Steens of Holland is "a shield of gold, with an eight-pointed, red (vermilion) star, surmounted by a rose of the same color." (See Introduction.)

DESCENDANTS OF JAMES STEEN.

JAMES STEEN was born in Malpos, Cheshire County, England, six miles from the city of Chester, May 19, 1761, and died in Richland, N. Y., February 19, 1826, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He was a land owner in England and a house builder by trade. Owing to the political troubles in 1793, high taxes, and the press gang going about the country enlisting men for the army and navy, peaceably if they could, but forcibly if they must, he sold his property in England for what he could get and removed to America in 1795. His great-grandfather removed from Holland into the North of England about the year 1700, where he spent the remainder of his life and brought up his family there.

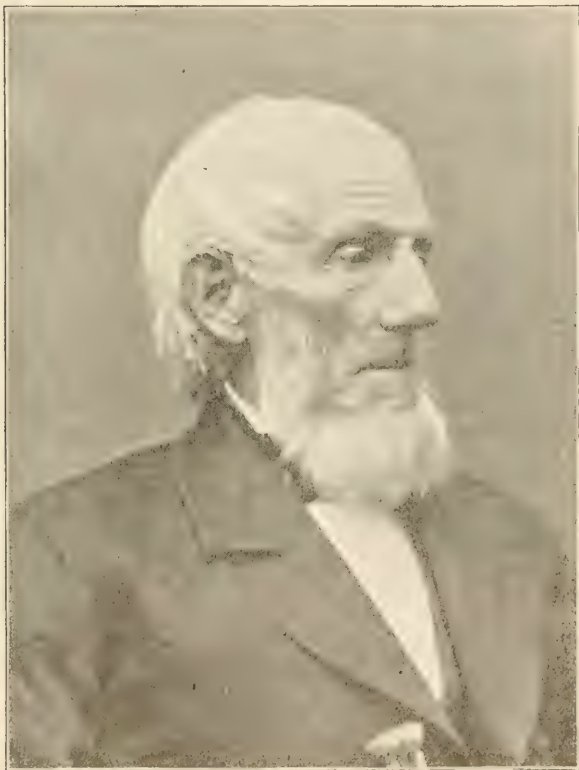

James Steen was married in Chester, England, in December, 1785, to Miss Elizabeth Wood, she having been born in that city January 7, 1759, and died in Brattleboro, Vt., in March, 1813, in the fifty-fifth year of her age. On leaving England, a Mr. Nelson, of London, heartily recommended him to Kish Booth, Esq., of Boston, Mass., whom he found on the ship "Galen," on which they made their journey to America. Through this friend Mr. Steen obtained a letter of introduction to the Rev. William Wells, D.D., who had then recently been called as the only pastor in Brattleboro, Vt., to which place James Steen went with his wife and family in 1795. Here he continued to live for twenty-three years, a prosperous and useful citizen. His wife and all his children having died, except one son and his only daughter, he removed to Richland, N. Y., in 1818, which was then a forest. He took with him to his new home his only daughter, leaving his only living son upon the old homestead in Brattleboro, Vt. At Richland he maintained himself and daughter by farming and working at his old-time trade as a house carpenter. After eight years' residence at Richland, N. Y., he died, February 19, 1826. His was the first grave ever made at Richland, and its location is shown by the following little chart:

The grave of James Steen lies at the front of the others, nearer to the pond, irregular as to line, and without a headstone to mark the spot. He was a noble Christian gentleman, who exerted in his day a wide influence for good. He was a Presbyterian in faith, industrious, studious, intelligent, and highly esteemed by all who knew him. To James and Elizabeth Wood Steen were born seven children, only two of whom lived to maturity, as follows:

- I.—James Steen, the eldest son of James and Elizabeth Wood Steen, was born in Chester, England, in July, 1787, and died in September of the same year.
- II.—James Steen (2nd), the second son of James and Elizabeth Wood Steen, was born in Chester, England, in October, 1788, and died the same year.
- III.—William Steen, the third son of James and Elizabeth Wood Steen, was born in Chester, England, in 1791, and died in Brattleboro, Vt., in 1797, when about six years old.
- IV.—James Steen (3rd), the fourth son of James and Elizabeth Wood Steen, was born in Chester, England, in 1794, and died in Brattleboro, Vt., in 1800, when about six years old.

JOSEPH STEEN.
(Born, 1797; died, 1881.)

V.—Joseph Steen, the fifth son of James and Elizabeth Wood Steen, was born in Brattleboro, Vt., March 4, 1797, where he lived a long and useful life. He died in peace in the Christian faith, August 7, 1881, in the eighty-fifth year of his age, and his body was tenderly laid away to rest in the Brattleboro Cemetery. The following extract from "The History of Brattleboro, Vermont," which was published two years before his death, is given to show the character of the man and the estimation in which he was held by those who knew him best:

The familiar form of this gentleman and his present quiet operations in the book and stationery business, continued since 1830, give no idea to the present generation, aside from the business aforesaid, what he has been and done in the period of eighty-two years since his birth in this place. The generation now passing off the stage of life have ever considered him an important acquisition, a tower of strength to any cause his honest convictions led him to advocate. And it is fortunate for this community that his power and influence has always been in the right direction. He has been a strong man, physically and mentally, often exercising the attributes in times of adversity advantageously to the condition of others less fortunate than himself. From his aid and counsels the latter have received courage and inspiration to face the ills of life. During his mercantile operations he has published eleven thousand royal octavo Bibles of fifteen hundred pages each; eleven thousand encyclopedias of religious knowledge of fifteen hundred pages each; two thousand school Bibles; one thousand pocket Testaments, besides large numbers of school books. Printing was hard work then, done by hand power, often stimulated by alcohol in the form of whisky, black strap, rum or rye gin. For being a solitary exception in total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, Mr. Steen was ridiculed by his fellow workmen; but he lived to see many of them fill drunkards' graves. In 1830 he was foremost in the Washingtonian movement. The self-reliant, independent character of the man is apparent from the foregoing, as also it was in every period of his life where decisive action was required. Mr. Steen obeyed the Scriptural command, "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." Over sixty years ago he joined the Congregational Church, and has been superintendent of the Sunday school over twenty-five years, and is yet the oldest member of these institutions. In 1838 he tried Democracy under Van Buren's administration, and for a short time was editor and proprietor of The Windham County Democrat, but in 1840 he again voted the Whig ticket, editing a Whig paper, called The Flail, which had a circulation of five thousand per week.

Mr. Steen was the agent here for paying pensions to the soldiers of the Revolution, continuing this duty till the last died. He was assignee in bankruptcy for Windham County in 1844, Justice of the Peace in 1848 and still held the office of Selectman in 1854-55. He was chosen school committee to put in operation the graded-school system in 1841—a plan of his own designing. He was severely censured by a wealthy man for his action respecting schools, but neither wealth nor position could ever shut his mouth. He was always ready to sell books, but never his principles.

Joseph Steen was married, in 1821, to Eliza Miller, of Heath, Mass., she having been born in 1800, and died in Brattleboro, Vt., in October, 1881. To them were born five children, as follows:

1. William Curtis Steen, the eldest son of Joseph and Eliza Miller Steen, was born in Brattleboro, Vt., December 20, 1824, and died March 3, 1863, in the thirty-ninth year of his age. CHAPTER X. •

CURTIS STEEN, of the Steens of Delaware, was of Swedish descent. There is an old tradition that the ancestor of Curtis Steen, or Curts, or Kurtz, as he was called, and who was known as "Big" Curts, was one of three brothers who came over from Sweden into America in 1638, probably with the Swedish expedition under Peter Minnit, or one of the other emigrations that followed within the next twenty years, to settle in New Sweden.

now the State of Delaware. It is said that one brother went to Fort Duquesne, where the city of Pittsburgh, Pa., now stands; another located in Bristol, Pa., and the third settled in Sussex County, Delaware. It is from the latter that the Steens of Delaware are descended. As late as the year 1900 it is reported that a daughter-in-law of Curtis Steen (Big Curtis), Mrs. Mary Johnson, had in her possession a copy of the old Swedish family tree and crest, or coat-of-arms, on parchment, but it is supposed to have been either destroyed or lost. The Swedish language was kept alive in the family down until the death of Curtis Steen's father. The great-grandfather of the present generation of Steens in Sussex County, Delaware, owned a very large tract of land in that county.

The information for this chapter was furnished almost entirely by Commodore Charles Lenox Wright, whose wife was formerly Elizabeth Lee Steen. He writes as follows: "As Delaware is famed for its lack of records and the Steens of this locality are nearly all dead, it is impossible to secure complete and accurate information." The following will give a brief outline or sketch, but leaving vacant many names and dates and important facts. A Mr. Steen, who was a descendant from Swedish ancestry, was born in Sussex County, Delaware, near the middle of the eighteenth century. He was married and brought up a family near Laurel, Delaware. He is known to have had at least two sons, who were married and brought up families in Sussex County, but the name of only one of these is known:

I.—Curtis Steen, who was called by his familiar friends "Big Curtis," was born near Laurel, Del., some time before the year 1800, and died before the Civil War. He was a prosperous farmer and was possessed of considerable property. His will is on record at Georgetown, Del. He was married about 1816 or 1818 and brought up a family of several sons and at least three daughters. Owing to the death of their father he also brought up on his own farm two of his grandchildren from infancy to maturity. The names of only two of the children of Curtis Steen I ("Big Curtis") are now known to his descendants, i. e., James Steen and Thomas Steen, although it is known that he had another son and at least two daughters:

1. James Steen, eldest (?) son of Curtis Steen I, was born upon his father's farm near Laurel, Del., about 1820. He was married probably about 1841 and lived near Lewes, Del., where he brought up a family of two sons and one daughter. The names of the sons are now unknown, but the name of the daughter was Jennie Steen. James Steen died about 1879 and his body was laid to rest in the family burying ground.

I.—Jennie Steen, the daughter of James Steen, was married to a Mr. Probbly.

2. Thomas Steen, the second son of Curtis Steen I, was born upon his father's farm near Laurel, Del., about 1822. He was married about 1843 to Julia ———. They lived upon a farm near Georgetown, Del. Both Thomas and Julia Steen are now dead. To them were born three children, as follows:

I.—Levin Steen, a son of Thomas and Julia Steen, was born near Georgetown, Del., about 1846. Levin Steen was a constable in Georgetown, Del., in 1911. He was married, and to himself and wife was born one son, as follows:

1. James Corbett Steen, a son of Levin Steen, was born in Sussex County, Del., in 1893. He was a teacher for four years, and in 1916 was a student for the ministry in Dickinson College.

II.—Burton Steen, a son of Thomas and Julia Steen, was born near Georgetown, Del.

III.—Curtis Steen, a son of Thomas and Julia Steen, was born near Georgetown, Del.

3. ——— Steen, a third son of Curtis Steen ("Big Curtis") and his wife, was born near Laurel, Del., about 1824. He was married about 1844 and was the father of two sons. He was a seaman or sailor by occupation and was drowned at sea in 1847, when his elder son was only two years old and before his younger son was born. His widow was married again to Josiah Johnson, and afterward to a Mr. Phillips, and their grandfather, Curtis Steen I, took the children to his own home, cared for them, and brought them up in his own home from infancy to maturity:

I.—James Martin Steen, the elder son of ——— Steen III and a grandson of Curtis Steen I, was born near Laurel,

Sussex County, Del., November 17, 1845. He was brought up by his grandfather, and afterward lived with his uncle, James Steen. He was what is now known as a civil engineer, built bridges, slips and wharves. He was a Civil War veteran, having enlisted at sixteen years of age in the Third Delaware Volunteer Regiment, and served throughout the war in the Army of the Potomac, his age preventing him from rising higher than a corporal. He was wounded three times and honorably discharged. James Martin Steen was drowned at Tiverton, R. I., October 16, 1898. His widow resides with her son at New Rochelle, N. Y. He was married in Philadelphia, Pa., July 29, 1871, to Sarah Lynch, a daughter of Greenberry and Mary Morris Lynch. To them were born three children, as follows:

1. Mary Anna Steen, the eldest child and only daughter of James Martin and Sarah Lynch Steen, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 18, 1873. She was married in Philadelphia, Pa., June 10, 1896, to the Rev. William Franklin Johnson, D.D., a descendant of Thomas Cross and Richard Warren, who came over in the Mayflower, and other prominent New England families, notably the Barlows and the Brittons. Captain Arnold Barlow commanded a ship of the line in the War of 1812. Dr. Johnson's father, William Johnson, served under Farragut in the Civil War. The Rev. William F. Johnson studied at Bucknell University and Crozer Theological Seminary and was ordained and installed pastor of the Baptist Church at Point Pleasant, Pa., in February, 1895. He was afterward pastor of Beth-Eden Baptist Church of New York City and the First Baptist Church of Long Branch, N. J. Residence, Brooklyn, N. Y. To the Rev. William F. and Mary Anna Steen Johnson two children were born, as follows:
 - a. Margaret Leah Johnson, the elder child, a daughter of Rev. William F. and Mary Anna Steen Johnson, was born in Long Branch, N. J., February 4, 1905.
 - b. Sylvia Adeline Johnson, the second child and daughter of Rev. William F. and Mary Anna Steen Johnson, was born in Jersey City, N. J., June 18, 1907.
2. Harry Greenberry Steen, the second child and elder son of James Martin and Sarah Lynch Steen, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., May 2, 1877. He operates a chain of restaurants. He was married in New York City, N. Y., February 4, 1899, to Miss Amy English. They have no children. Residence, New Rochelle, N. Y.

3. Paul Revere Steen, the third child and second son of James Martin and Sarah Lynch Steen, was born in New York City, N. Y. Unmarried in 1916. He is connected with his brother in business. Residence, New Rochelle, N. Y.

II.—William Burton Steen, the younger son of ——— Steen III, and a grandson of Curtis Steen I, was born near Laurel, Sussex County, Del., October 20, 1847, his father having been drowned at sea the same year, but before his birth. He was brought up in the family of his grandfather, Curtis Steen, who left him considerable property. CHAPTER XI.

THE STEENS IN HOLLAND.

In the introduction to this work brief mention was made of Steens in Holland and their characteristics in the dark days of religious persecution.

The explanations here given, together with names taken from city directories in Holland, were furnished by Aire H. Voorwinden, Esq., Vice-Consul of the United States in Rotterdam.

The old Dutch word for "Castle" is Steen, and the ancient castle in Antwerp is still called "The Steen." The word "Van" means "of," and probably implies that the original bearers of the name "Van Steen" were men of stone, or strong men. The word "der" or "den" means "the," and indicates that the original bearers of the name "Van der Steen" or "Van den Steen" were in some way connected with a castle. The name "Steen" following any other surname, as, for instance, "Brand Van der Steen," would show that the "Brands" were ancient noblemen, and formerly owned a castle.
